The narviage of Miss Carrie Ditters of the reciprocity plans, a generation hed grown up that did not know Joseph.

Mr. Cowan briefly sketched Canada's huge prosperity. Why endanser it? Home-owners chould not be hoodwinked by partisan policies that suggested destruction to the prosperity the national policy has built up. Had the Conservative party fathered reciprocity he would have opposed it. Reciprocity cast a shadow over the prosperity of Canada. Already in Oshawa that shadow had been baneful. One industry employing from 40 to 50 men would have been started in Oshawa if reciprocity had not been put forward. Plans had been made in Oshawa in competition with the world. But the soveniment had cut off the duty and the factory had been lengaged and it had been demonstrated that these links could be made in Oshawa in competition with the world. But the government had cut off the duty and the factory had been lost to Oshawa, for the trade was thus turned over to mine large factories in the U. S. Canada or Not Canada. Mr. Maclean was warmly received. for twenty years and in public life longer than that and found it pretty much made up of hard knocks. But when he heard a man like Mr. Cowan pay such a generous tribute to his father, it made up for all the hard knocks. (Applause.)

"It is Canada or not Canada that is the issue in this election," declared Mr. Maclean. He traced the history of Canada's attainment of her own presentation was made at Mr. Denison.

of Canada's attainment of her own liscal independence, resulting in Canadians being masters of their own tariff with the right to make it as it suited themselves. The basis of the national themselves. The basis of the national themselves attained to the critical forms attained to the critical forms at the c policy was to keep our own work for our own people and build up our own country. Canada's prosperity was due to the fact that for 16 years we had a parliament and a people united in maintaining the national policy. Was it not strange that Sir Wilfrid Laurier now proposed to part with our fiscal independence and share 't with the independence and share 't with the people of the U. S. and President Taft? ordinarily the making of a tariff was in the hands of the members of the house of commons and nobody else. But the method of foisting the reciprocity pact on parliament was the freatest constitutional revolution of his time. That pact was a tariff bill that changed the balanced national policy upside down. Yet Mr. Fielding had said to parliament. "Here is the new tariff. You must accept it holusbolus." And that tariff had the name of the president of the U. S. attached to it.

Mr. and Mrs. Archie Burland have returned to Grimsby. Mr. Burland was in town for the exhibition and was judge of the cat show, which was such a success.

Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Warren have taken Mrs. C. D. Warren's house in Walmer-road, for the winter.

Never Too Late for Justice. The market gardeners of South York avenue.

The market gardeners of South York to whom the new tariff meant ruin, had protested, but they were told: "You have come too late." It ought never be too late to give justice under the tariff to the people of Canada. S. was to be consulted about our tariff, then good-by to the nationality of Canada.

Cheers). Mr. Maclean charged Messrs. Fieldng and Paterson with lacking information in negotiating the pact. The U.S. experts had studied the question. When information finally was brought lown to he house it was in the form of book printed in Washington.

He re-affirmed his intention never on, and advised his hearers to send to Ottawa a man who would say, "We must have complete control of our own

Mr. Foster's main subject was the value to the farmer of the protected Canadian home markets; the danger to them from the reciprocity pact, and the loss to Canada which he held would be considered to the constant of the or might result in carrying our com-merce north and south into American channels instead of east and west thru Canadian routes. He pictured Jim Hill's rallways as leaches ready to suck the life blood of Canadian industries and give to the American middleman the profits which should be Canada's. He did not believe, he said, that the Canadian electors would vote for any such sacrifice of their own interests. Foster speaks to-morrow in Antigonish, next day in Halifax, and then he goes to Toronto. Mr. and Mrs. Archie Burland have re-
