READJUSTING PARK BOUNDARIES

A proposed readjustment of the boundaries of the Canadian National Park has caused considerable excitement at Banff. It is alleged that the portion taken from the park and sim-ply made a forest reserve includes some of the best game portions of the parx, of the best game portions of the park, and its withdrawal from game protection means a virtual extermination of the game. The Banff Board of Trade have petitioned the government to make a new game preserve of that por-tion of the country between the old and the new boundaries and levy hunting tax of $25 on residents : $50 on non-residents, such tax to be aplicable to the Indians, and that a patrol of the park with game guardians be continued. The Alberta Fish and Game Protective Association have also requested the government not to withdraw protection from the area. It is principally over the northern part of the park that the difficulty arises.

WHY BEER IS GOOD.

Altho beer does not contain a large amount of nutrient material, there appears to be little doubt that in the healthy individual it favors the assimilation of food in a manner akin to such condimental substances as meat extract, peppear, salt, vinegar, mustard and so forth. Recent investigations on this point at all events show that mait extractives contained in beer added to a dietary almost devoid of organic condiments, increase the assimilation of non-nitrogenous foodstuffs, particularly fats. In addition, so per cent, of the extractives of beer themselves are assimilated and yield about sipef cent, of their thermal energy to the system. Beer supplies, however, a negistive amount of proteins, but the stimulus of it salcohol increases protein absorption from nitrogenous foods.

In these scientific terms, therefore, the practical observation that heer, bread and cheese make an appetizing, nutritious whole, receives definite engorsement.

Physiologists have put forward from time to time various explanations of the fulness and plethora which often succeed the habitual and excessive drinking of beer—it is strikingly exemplified in the brewer's man—and it how appears that this effect is not due to the nutritives of the beer, but to the tonic or condimental action of the malt extractives, which increase the assimilation of the foodstuffs partaken with it.—Lancet
