> Particular attention is drawn to the auction sale advertised in this issue of building lots on Ridout street south on Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock on the grounds. This is a most desirable section of the city, and it is a good thing that the property has at last been put on the market, as the delay in so doing has retarded the growth of the city in that direction for years, hope to soon see this portion of the city as thickly populated as our northern and eastern parts. It is probable that arrangements will be made for the erection on a prominent corner of the property of a church to replace the mission now situated on High street.

Trembling in every limb he made his way by the path in which the danger lay. He reached his goal in safety and in prayer and song returned thanks for delivery from peril. When his prayer had ended he rose to return. In his path lay a piece of solid gold "as large as a curtain ring." Dayton, one of Boecke's principal creditors, has seen fit to talk extendedly of his missing patron, up to yesterday Mr. Dayton had been most reticent when questioned concerning his dealings with Boecke. Boecke; it will be remembered, lived for some years in China, where, as in New York, his acquaintance with influential men was extensive. One of Boecke's most intimates in China was Prince Pu Lun, the principal leader of the Reform, or Revolutionary party, which seeks to replace the present Dowager Empress by a more enlightened and liberal monarch.

Boecke became, it would seem, an active member of the Reform party, and was delegated by its leaders to proceed to this country and act as purchasing agent.

Mr. Dayton stated yesterday that Boecke had shown him communications from Prince Pu Lun and other notables of the Celestial Empire, and he ward the erection of a hospital for was apparently convinced of Boecke's consumptives was taken up, County importance, and accordingly Boecke had no difficulty in procuring credit to the extent of some $50,000 at the Dayton establishment.

Bought Arms for China.

Speaking of Boecke's activities in China, Mr. Dayton said: "The backer most influential man behind Boecke in his Chinese schemes was Prince Pu Lun. There are two parties of power in China. One is the progressive or reform crowd, and the other the reactionary. It may surprise R. S. "The messages he received at this time urged him to hasten in completing certain arrangements he was exsilver. The indications are tnat pros- pected to look after. Just what the nature of these arrangements were I am not fully aware, but I do know that the matter of shipping certain supplies to those he represented in the Orient was part of the orders. Boecke was badly in need of money to execute these orders, and he had to raise funds as best he could. "Upon the death of the Dowager Empress, a great struggle in China was anticipated by Boecke and those associated with him. The struggle would be for the control of the present Emperor, who is a weakling, and who would be in absolute control upon the death of his mother. A prince of high rank was opposed to Prince Lu Pun and those that sought to institute reforms in opening up China and her vast resources to the outside world.
