FINE YOUNG EAGLE SHOT IN DELAWARE BY LONDON BANKER

NEST IN THE VICINITY

Ornithologists Regret That Rare Bird Was Killed, Others Rejoice.

A young eagle of the bald variety, neasuring five feet seven inches with wings outspread, was shot down by Harvey F. Skey, manager of the local branch of the Bank of Montreal (for merly the Bank of British Nort America), yesterday evening at the Beaver Stock Farm, near Delaware The bird had been fired at severa times recently by residents of th vicinity, who used shot guns, vithout success.

However, in company with Major Gordon Ingram and Gerald F. Pearson, manager of the market branch of the bank, Mr. Skey visited the Beaver Stock Farm last night armed with a .22 calibre rifle. About dusk the bird was seen hovering in the sky, and as it paused on a turn, the sniper aimed and fired. The victim wabbled slightly in its flight, and then careened earth-ward into a clump of bushels some distance away.

Badly Wounded. Making a detour, the party stalked up to the bushes, but after a search no trace of the eagle was found. When about to leave the scene the trio heard a slight scream, and a short distance away the huge bird was seen, seated on a log, reeling like a police court drunk.

away the huge bird was seen, seaded on a log, reeling like a police court drunk.

Mr. Skey with a second shot then finished the eagle's career, and upon examination it was seen that the first bullet had penetrated the left wing. The bird is now in the possession of the stuffed and embalmed for preservation. It is claimed that 20 turkeys and 20 chickens have been lost at the Beaver Stock Farm during the past month and the eagle is blamed for the theft. In fact, a young chicken was found beneath the nest of the bird, which is a huge affair at the top of a very tall tree near the scene of the shooting. The talons on the dead eagle measure over one inch in length.

Regrets the Death.

The bird was identified as of the young bald species by W. E. Saunders of the local Ornithological Society, this morning. While the farmers near Delaware are enthusiastic over the shooting the joy is not universal, according to Mr. Saunders. "Members of the Ornithological Society knew of this nest last spring," he said to The Advertiser today, "and we were hoping that no one would disturb the birds, as the eagle is rapidly becoming extinct in this county. Ordinarily they live on fish washed up on the lake, shore, but as there are no fish in the vicinity the bird may have taken an odd fowl or two. However, I caimot believe that all the missing poultry were prey of the eagle. There are minks and weasels in the district, and these animals no doubt contributed to the damage. I am glad that it is a young eagle that was shot, as the adult birds will go away, and the remaining young will be preserved as fauna of Middlesex County."

Mr. Saunders stated that the bird was a small eagle and had not been dyling many weeks. It bore head plumage, and but for its untimely death would have been bald in two years' time. He also stated that if the next morning the place is a poung and the contributed to the damage. I am glad that it is a young eagle and had not been dyling many weeks. Parker was arrested last night in company with Annie Cornelius, an Indian girl from the Oneida Reserve at Niagara in a vacant house. Indian girl from the Oneida Reserve at Niagara in a vacant house.

"They all turned me down, even my wife and family, and now I don't care." Parker said bitterly, when he was asked why he had lowered himself to his associations of the last year.

"It seems peculiar that a white man like you should go about with these people the way you have been doing," the magistrate said.

"They are there than my own people."

"They're better than my own people," Parker returned. He was fined $10 and costs for trespassing, and the Cornelius girl will be sent back to her parents at the Oneida Reserve.

WORK GOING AHEAD ON NEW HOLEPROOF MAY BE MINISTER HOSIERY PLANT HERE

Contractors Hope To Have It Completed by New Year.

Work is being rushed on the new $195,000 Holeproof Hosiery building at the corner of Bathurst and Clarence streets, and the contractors hope to have the building completed and ready for occupation by the new year. At any rate, it is expected that the roof will be on the new structure before the snow flies, and the interior will be completed later.

Workmen have commenced to lay the foundation for the east side of the new factory, while a steam shovel is busily engaged excavating a deep basement in the west end. Hard clay has been struck here, but the shovel is nibbling away a depth of over fifteen feet, having been excavated at this location. Three shovel loads fill a wagon, which is drawn up an inclined runway to the road by two teams of horses.

Expecting to strike water during the excavating the contractors installed an electric pump at the west end of the site, but owing, to dry weather the pump has not been utilized to a very great extent.

weather the pump has not been utilized to a very great extent.

Webster & Stone, American contractors, have charge of the work on the new building, but the contract has been sub-let to Canadian contractors. A Hamilton firm is engaged on the excavation work, the steam shovel having been forwarded from that city, while local teamsters are carting the earth away. Local contractors will provide the cut-stone and will decorate the interior of the new structure. Webster & Stone have transformed one of the houses formerly on Bathurst street, into an office, having moved it out onto the Clarence street boulevard. Many local laborers are employed on the job, and there will be many more openings for labor here in the near future.
