Says Germans Are Not Nearly Beaten Yet, However.

"The work of former Boy Scouts on the stage fine is simply splendid," declared H G. Hammond, provincial secretary of the Boy Scout Council of Ontario, who just returned from a trip to England of France. While there Mr. Hammond made an exhaustive tour of the Canadian amps in England and also of the trenches. He had the privilege of being with the Canadians, fighting in their own lines, and on one occasion was in a front line trench about one hundred and fifteen yards from the Huns. His trip primarily was to visit all the Scouts and ex-Scouts ow on active service with the C.E.F." I saw hundred of Scouts on my tour and they are proving themselves good clows, and all the better for having been Scouts." he continued. "They are having plendid success in rendering first aid, and in the Somme last summer great praise was given to the boys of the 5th Fleid ambulance, a great many of whom were prominently connected with the Scout movement in Toronto before callsting. The Duke of Connaught is even more keen on the movement now, and Sir Baden-Powel, the father of the Scouts, on one occasion stated to me that this war would be won by natural development, and the great war, the commercial war, would be decided by the generation of boys which were now growing up.

A Great Future.

"In this regard I agree with him and believe that the future of the Scouts is brighter today than ever before. The Scout movement stands for good citizenship and it has been tested and not found arting."
