The request for delay came, not from the official leader of the opposition, but evidently from some the opposition, but evidently from some one representing another parliamentary group. Moreover, it came at more than the eleventh hour. As a matter of fact, the conscription Liberals, who foregathered this morning, could not decide just what to do on the subject of extension and at the last moment put up A. K. #### ROBINS PLAYERS IN CLEVER COMEDY

Give Merry Presentation of Post's Bright, Three-Act Farce.

A large and enthusiastic audience ap-plauded and laughed over the revival last night at the Royal Alexandra by the last night at the Royal Alexandra by the Robins Players of Will H. Post's three-act farce, "Never Say Die." There is an absurd air of reality about the whole production which makes the most ridiculous points in the plot seem quite natural, and this most successful piece was given a performance that could scarcely have been bettered. Miss Helen Travers and Miss Virginia Fox Brookes had the two leading lady parts and acted very charmingly. Miss Travers has shown herself highly versatile, and she was gracefully gracious as Hon. Mrs. Stevenson. There is a pretty scene between mother and daughter near the opening of the play. Violet wisnes to inserv a penntless artist, and her mother does not wholly approve, having a wenithy match in view, but she consents.

Toronto for twenty years. Her statement follows:

"Since the early part of last winter. I have suffered a great deal with catarrh. My nasal passages felt raw and irritated all the time, my throat was dry, and my head felt stopped up—just like a severe cold. I had dull throbbing headaches that kept me awake for hours many a night.

"Besides this trouble I had indigestion and was dreadfully nervous. The least little noise completely upset me, I often had trembling spells, and would shake all over, I had no appetite, and the little I ate disagreed with me. I simply felt miserable, and some days I just had to quil work and go home.

"I have now taken two bottles of Taniac, and my improvement has been wonderful. The catarrh is gradually disappearing, my head feels clearer, the nasal passages are not sore and irritated like they were, and I don't have those awful headaches like I did. I am not nervous, and I don't have those awful headaches like I did. I am not nervous, and I don't have those awful headaches like I did. I am not nervous, and I don't have those awful headaches like I did. I am not nervous, and I don't have those awful headaches like I did. I am not nervous, and I don't have those awful headaches like I did. I am not nervous, and I don't have those awful headaches like I did. I am not nervous, and I don't have those awful headaches like I did. I am not nervous, and I don't have those awful headaches like I did. MARY PICKFORD AGAIN AT THE REGENT THEATRE

Famous Star Appears in Play Dealing With Days of California's Gold Rush.

Western days in California in the year when men gave their lives in the lust for gold, were dramatically staged in the screen shown at the Regent yesterday afternoon, with Mary Pickford in the role of Jenny Law-rence, and Elliott Dexter as "Black" Brown, leader of a gang who rob other men of the gold for which they have honestly toiled, as co-star of the cast. Jenny is an orphan bequeathed by her mother to an uncle who has gone to the eldorado of the west. Obedient to the wishes of her mother, the girl leaves kindly aunts and other sindred, and with all the bandboxes and trunks, without which a young and trunks, without which a young lady of that period could not travel, she starts on her long voyage. Meantime her uncle has been held up, robbed and killed. "Black" Brown, in addition to taking the gold of the dead man, secures his papers and im-personates him, installing himself in the cabin of John Lawrence and being in possession when Jenny arrives. How the girl is received, and how she brings about a transformation in the life of "Black" Brown, whose life she eventually saves by a most unexpected ruse, are all brought out in the story, in the course of which the screen's most popular artist is seen in a var of the week.

RACING MELODRAMA

Big Scene in "The Whip" is Collision of Express Train and an Automobile.

FEATURES GRAND BILL

The picturization of "The Whio." the English spectacular racing melodrama which caused such a furore when produced on the legitimate stage some years ago, is being presented again at the Grand Opera House. It has been said that the film is mor thrilling than any other melodrama reproduced on the screen, and there is little doubt the assertion is true. Certainly it is the best picture of its kind seen in Toronto.

The exterior as well as the interior photography is remarkable in every particular, and not a detail is lack-ing, while the story itself is absorbing, the book being followed faith fully. The interest is well sustained; follow one another in rapid succession and this is closely followed by the motor accident in which Barncaster, the hero of the story, is badly hurt The biggest scene in the picture, the collision of an express train and the car in which the racehorse was being secretly shipped to the Saratoga race track, is depicted with a realism which sends a shudder thru the audience The final scene at Saratoga, in which "The Whip" wins the big race, ridden by the heroine of the plot, provides a fitting denouement.

All the principal roles are well played, and there is no doubt the return engagement at the Grand will be a successful one. Large crowds attended the theatre at each performance yesterday.

SONG AND DANCE REVUE AT THE HIPPODROME

Splendid Costumes and Scenic Effects and Excellent Vaudeville Program.

Featured by an act entitled, "The Song and Dance Revue" which for scenic effects and costumes excels anything of a like character which has been shown in Toronto for many weeks, an unusually interesting are gram of vaudeville and motion pictures is presented to patrons of the Hippodrome this week.

"The Song and Dance Revue" is drome this week.

"The Song and Dance Revue" is a novelty of singing of catchy airs and spectacular dancing. A large chorus is frequently presented in bright and original costumes. Frank Mullane sings Irish sentimental songs well, and tells innumerable Irish and Jewish anecdotes. Lala Selbini, the "Ragtime Bicycle Girl" performs many tricks, most of which are new. La Petite Elva is a little girl who sings and acts, and yesterday scored a success with her yesterday scored a success with her audience, particularly in her impersonation of Harry Lauder.

The Victoria Four is a quartet which presents clever comedy and a program of popular songs, all of which are well audience; Du Val and Simons, in a bill with an act in which a number of

The plot is based on the story of a girl who goes to the northland to avenge the supposed death of her brother. Lyon F. Reynolds, the author, has fittingly pointed out the code of the Klondyke in his story. The success of the photoplay is due in no small measure to the theatrical ability of the leading characters, Myrtle Goncalez, George Hernandez and Gretcher

AT THE MADISON. Everything about the Russia of to day is of great interest just now, and "The Austrian Spy," which is head-lining the bill at the Madison Theatre for the first half of this week, has Russia of today for its theme. The photoplay is one which deals largely interest as well. Theodore Roberts and Anita King are the co-stars.

In this photoplay, Gail Kane as Faith Channing, the country girl of Puritan principles, is seen to excellent advantage. Her artistic and the atrical abilities are given full scope and she is a fascinating star thruout the start. She becomes Mrs. James with political intrigue. The plot centres around the designs of the chief of the secret police—an Austrian spy in disguise—but it has a strong heart (William Conklin) strives to fulfill social ambitions. The Germans poured avalanches of high explosives on the French positions on Mont Blond, while the French swept the German works over the crest with tornadoes of fire. The bombardment reached a pitch of insane violence an hour before the attack. The slopes of Mont Blond and Mont Haut smoked as if all the fires of Hades were breaking thru. Clouds of mingled breaking thru. Clouds of mingled smoke and dust hung in the air in smoke and dust hung in the air in solid banks. Great curtains of smoke kept leaping up behind the crast line where the French shells were bursting on the German trenches. It was scarcely conceivable that men could live in that indeous turmoil, still less that they could coolly await the order to leave the remains of their shelters, to dash thru the midst of it. No-thing could be seen of the French assault in the hurricane of shell bursts; but within half an hour the news was flashed back that the French infantry had taken the whole of their objectives, the saddle between Mont Blond and Mont Haut, besides the position on Mont Haut itself—in 36 minutes.

German Panic Signals. "A panicky outburst of German rockets and red and yellow light signals from behind the crest immediate-ly after the attack revealed the progress that the French were making. The Boche was bawling for help with all the fireworks in his possession. The French general commanding afterwards described the battle, from the observers' viewpoint, as a fourteenth of July fireworks show. And this was justified, because during the whols battle the evening sky was continually lit by rockets and flares of all sorts and colors, showing that the Boche was hard pressed and desperately needing reinforcements and more artillery surport needing reinforcements and more artillery support.

"Meanwhile the French departure trenches on the slopes of Mont Blond were being transformed into a sea of milky vapor in which even shell bursts were invisible. What resembled serpents of white smoke with heads of fire wandered methodically to and fro across the battlefield, dragging after them a thickening cloud of woolly vapor made of their own expanding bodies, which hid the ground as effectively as if a roof were built over it. The Germans evidently felt the loss of vision keenly. Five of their loss of vision keenly. Five of their sausage-balloons appeared on the sky-line, extraordinarily low, and so close that a special squadron of German airplanes had to be sent to protect them. Taking all risks, they hung in the sky for close that the sky for over an hour, going down hurriedly when a French airplane neared them. It was the last desperate effort to see what the French were doing in that sea of smoke. But they could make out nothing.

"Several hundred prisoners were captured—three hundred within an hour on Mont Blond alone. The first enemy counter-attack, which made within two hours, failed completely. The French at present hold their gains intact, and the German attempt to recapture Moronvilliers heights has been successfully forestalled thru the capture of the enemy's line of departs
