Plots to Murder Brusseloff and Korniloff and Destroy Munition Plants Alleged—Looked After German Emisaries

William Le Queux, the well-known sensational novelist, has never imagined anything more sensational than the actual facts he is laying before the English people through the columns of the Illustrated Sunday Herald. He has come into possession, apparently, of the contents of a safe owned by Rasputin, and the treasure trove consists largely of correspondence carried on between Rasputin and various other German agents. It tells of plots to murder Brusseloff and Korniloff, of instructions to stop Russian advances, of the release from Russian prisons of German agents who had been detected, besides revealing the ramifications of Rasputin's blackmail scheme. He had letters from various prominent persons, mostly women, which he intended to use to protect himself if ever his power was threatened. Fortunately he did not have time to call upon his victims for protection, as he was murdered out of hand by a group of loyal Russians.

Brusseloff Betrayed

One amusing letter was written to Rasputin from Berlin, in a secret German cipher, and was dated August 29, 1916. It facts he is laying before the English people through the columns of the Illustrated Sunday Herald. He has come into possession, apparently, of the contents of a safe owned by Rasputin, and the treasure trove consists largely of correspondence carried on between Rasputin and various other German agents. It tells of plots to murder Brusseloff and Korniloff, of instructions to stop Russian advances, of the release from Russian prisons of German agents who had been detected, besides revealing the ramifications of Rasputin's blackmail scheme. He had letters from various prominent persons, mostly women, which he intended to use to protect himself if ever his power was threatened. Fortunately he did not have time to call upon his victims for protection, as he was murdered out of hand by a group of loyal Russians.

Blowing Up Munition Plants

He goes on to complain that a couple of ammunition factories had not been destroyed as ordered, and protested that Kartoff, a clock-maker, who had blown up explosive works at Viborg, in which 400 lives were lost, had been arrested and shot, together with a woman named Rerovsky, whose father was in the department of the interior under Petrovoff. Rasputin had informed his German paymasters that the pair had fallen in love, and that it was better they should be executed for fear they might become dangerous. The apology seems to have been somewhat curiously received, and the note proceeded to give Rasputin instructions to secure the release of three or four other prisoners, awaiting trial for similar outrages. The letter went on to specify certain ammunition works which were to be destroyed, named the agents who were to be entrusted with the various tasks, and also the amount of money he was to pay in each case. In parenthesis it is to be noted that in the Rasputin dossier were found one hundred advice notes of German money paid to the monk through the most unscrupulous channels.

Plot to Murder Korniloff

He was instructed with considerable particularity how he should arrange the murder of Korniloff. He was to be removed by the accidental discharge of a hand-grenade "in the same manner in which Gen. Zhukovsky was removed in March last at Pultusk." The chosen assassin was to be a soldier named Paul Krishinsky, who as a despatch rider had access to headquarters.

ROOMS TO LET

was to pretend to be examining a bomb, a pineapple one in preference, and release the pin by accident. For this service he was to get 15,000 roubles. The attempt was made upon Korniloff ten days later. The general's band was killed on the spot, but Korniloff escaped with a cut on the face. What happened to the soldier is not known, nor is it explained how it would be possible for a man to give an air of realism to an accident with a bomb which killed somebody else and spared the bomb-dropper. Unless the thing could be made to appear like an accident, what good would the 15,000 roubles be?

Tried to Poison Brusseloff

Brusseloff was to be removed by another means. Rasputin was instructed to send to a certain doctor, who would provide him with poison. The next step was to have permission granted to one of Brusseloff's body servants to invite a friend in another regiment, the latter being a German agent, to visit him at Brusseloff's headquarters. The friendly assassin, being provided with the poison, which was guaranteed to produce tetanus, was to introduce it into the general's food. It turned out that the poison was dropped into some coffee that was drunk by another officer, who died in a few days. The price for this job was set down at 25,000 roubles, but payment was to be withheld until the murder had been committed. Whether the Le Queux revelations are a fake, we cannot determine. So many amazing things have happened in Russia that they may be true. And, by the way, there is no record of any fancy price being set on the head of Kerensky.

KISSING THE BLACK STONE

As well die a Jew or a Christian as not make the pilgrimage to Mecca, said Mohammed, and no obligation of Islam is more piously discharged. It is believed that the ritual connected with the visit to the Ka'aba—the "square building"—and the kissing of the black stone go back to the day of idolatry, the "time of ignorance" before the new faith bubbled, comments the London Chronicle.

The black stone, which measures about six inches by eight, is believed to have fallen from Paradise, to have been guarded during the deluge and handed to Abraham by Gabriel when the Ka'aba was built. Certain parts of the ceremonial—the throwing of stones at the devil and the initiation of Hagar's distracted wanderings in the "desert"—are supposed to have had significance for the pre-Mohammedan times as well as for Islam.
