

British Casualties Well Up To 300,000

London, June 9.—Premier Asquith announced in the house of commons today that the total of British casualties from the beginning of the war to May 31 was 258,069 men killed, wounded and missing.

Divided into categories of killed, wounded and missing, officers and men, the list shows the following:

Killed—Officers, 3,321; other ranks, 47,015; total, 50,336.

Wounded—Officers, 6,498; other ranks, 147,482; total, 153,980.

Missing—Officers, 1,180; other ranks, 52,617; total, 53,797.

The losses in the naval division are not included in this list.

Mr. Asquith's statement of losses was for the continental and Mediterranean forces of the empire. He promised to give the losses in the naval division later. Neither did the list of today include the forces of Great Britain engaged in the various smaller wars in Africa and the Near East.

The total will not be far short of 300,000. This is by far a larger army than Great Britain sent to South Africa and in fact a larger force than was ever gathered for any of the glorious wars of her history.

The last statement of losses was in December when about 104,000 were reported so that the winter and spring campaigns have proven more disastrous from the point of view of losses than the first four months of the war. A recent estimate of German losses placed them at 2,100,000 but considering the far greater number of men engaged and the battlefront many times longer, it is believed that at the same ratio of the British losses the figure would be more like 4,000,000.

The percentage of wounded returning to duty after their names appear in the casualty lists is very large, having been estimated at 60 per cent. so that this fact reduces the losses as unaccounted very materially.

Corns Are Out-of-Date

They Indicate Methods Which Are Obsolete Now

Folks who have corns are folks who are out-of-date, or use liquids, or some other old-time treatment—ways not up-to-date.

Most folks don't keep corns now. When one appears they apply a Blue-jay plaster. The pain stops instantly. In 48 hours the corn disappears forever.

A famous chemist found this way to end corns without pain or soreness. Now millions use it. Fully half the corns that grow are ended as soon as they appear.

There is no excuse for corns. You can't prevent them, maybe, but you can remove them quickly. There will be no lasting corn on any feet when all folks know of Blue-jay.

JAMAICA SHOULD SEND A THOUSAND SOLDIERS

Kingston, Jamaica, June 10.—Newspapers and public men contend that Jamaica should not send fewer than a thousand men to England as a war contingent. A special war tax is strongly advocated, and public meetings are being arranged to decide what several parties should do to aid the movement. Voluntary subscriptions for the contingent's expenses are coming in, but the view is generally expressed that the legislature should aid in making the contingent as large as possible.

SASKATCHEWAN NEWS

Regina, June 9.—Concluding proof that Regina is the centre of the greatest crop-producing section of the province is afforded by statistics compiled by the department of agriculture. Not only do the figures show that four times as much crop is grown in the four crop districts tributary to the city as in the other five crop districts of the province, but also that the average yield of wheat per acre has been steadily increasing from 1910 to 1914, the last year for which complete returns are available. The total wheat crop raised in the four crop districts tributary to Regina in 1914 was 83,169,878 bushels or an average of 12.5 bushels to the acre, as compared with a total of 24,178,727 bushels for the rest of the province. The returns in oats, flax and barley are somewhat similar for these districts.

The Jewish community of Regina will have their own school through the efforts of prominent members of the congregation in the city.

MISS MORRISON NOT GUILTY

Bangor, Me., June 9.—Miss Catherine M. A. Morrison, of this city, the former Nova Scotia woman indicted for the illegal use of the United States mails, was today acquitted of the charge in the United States District Court after a trial lasting three days. The jury was out just an hour.

The government charged Miss Morrison with having circulated in the United States mails a magazine known as the "Honest Worker," in the furtherance of a plan to defraud the claims being that she represented that subscriptions to the magazine were used for the purpose of rescuing neglected children and orphans, whereas she devoted a part of the proceeds to her own personal use.

The government summoned fifty witnesses, and there were a score for the defence, the case attracting a great deal of interest in this section. In answer to the government's charge, Miss Morrison contended that while the magazine was her personal property, she had devoted its proceeds outside of bare expenses to rescue work.

She is understood to be interested in the establishment of a children's home at Loch Lomond (N. S.), and is well known in New Brunswick.
