

NOW ENJOYING SPLENDID HEALTH

Nervousness and Dyspepsia Cured By "Fruit-a-tives"

WATERLOO, Ont., May 9th, 1911.
"My trouble was extreme nervousness, brought on by indigestion or dyspepsia, from which I suffered in its worst form. I asked Mr. Hunter, my druggist, about 'Fruit-a-tives' and he advised me to try them."

I took several boxes and am pleased to say I am now enjoying the health of a young man. I owe my health to 'Fruit-a-tives' and strongly advise any one suffering from indigestion, dyspepsia, nervousness or sleeplessness, to commence using 'Fruit-a-tives' and continue this remedy until a cure is accomplished."

ALEX. MCARTER.
'Fruit-a-tives' is sold by all dealers at 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial size, 25c, or write Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Daily Hints For the Cook

BLUEBERRY PUDDING.

One-half cup butter, 1 cup sugar, 2 eggs. Beat all together, sift 2 cups flour with 2 level teaspoons baking powder and add to first mixture alternately with cup milk. Stir in 1 1/2 cups blueberries, steam 3 hours and eat with sauce.

BANANA PUDDING.

Scald 1 quart of milk, add the well-beaten yolks of 3 eggs, 1 tablespoon of corn starch and granulated sugar to taste. Boil long enough to make a nice thick cream. Thinly slice 3 bananas, arrange in a pudding dish, then pour the boiled liquid over them. Make a meringue of the whites of the eggs, cover the top and bake all in moderate oven until a nice brown. Serve when it is quite cool.

Secret of Baking Good Bread

There is probably no accomplishment that a woman glories in more than the ability to bake good bread. White Swan Yeast Cakes always ensure a light, wholesome and delicious bread. Send for prospectus in 8c. packages of 6 cakes. Send to day for sample. White Swan Yeast & Cakes, Limited, Toronto, Ont.

CANNING OF FRUITS.

The good jars; be sure they are perfectly airtight and absolutely clean. Use new pliable rubbers. Sterilize jars by placing in cold water and heating until the water comes to the boiling point. Sterilize rubbers, tops, dipper and funnel by merely dipping them in the boiling water. Small jars are preferable for most families.

Twelve jars, put on a board or on a cloth, wrung out of hot water. Have preserves boiling hot when put into jars; fill to the very brim. Break all bubbles with a sterilized silver spoon. Put top on each jar and seal at once. Tighten tops after jars have cooled.

The success in canning and preserving depends on heating the fruit until all the germs are destroyed, then sealing it airtight while still hot. The best success is always obtained if small quantities are handled at a time. -Edith Lockwood Day in Woman's World for August.

How's This?

We offer One Hundred Dollars Reward for any case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure.

P. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

We the undersigned have known P. J. Cheney, for the last 15 years, and believe him perfectly honorable in all business transactions and financially able to carry out any obligations made by him.

WALDEN, KENNY & MARVIN, Wholesale Druggists, Toledo, O. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Testimonials sent free. Price 75 cents per bottle. Sold by all Druggists.

Take Hall's Family Pill for constipation.

A fire signal and carrier pigeon conveyed to the mainland near Edinburgh, Scotland, the news that an accident had occurred on the island of the Ayrshire coast. Immediately after the lookout man at Gifford, two miles away, had noticed the flame—the usual signal that a doctor was required—the pigeon arrived with a message stating that a man had been injured. A boat with a doctor in it put off at once.

That Hitting-Catcher

"Charlie" Dooin
Clever player-manager of the Phillies. There's a fighter—a worker—a quick thinker; no wonder he likes and Drinks

Coca-Cola

It's like him—it does for you what he does for his team; banishes that tired feeling—chock full of snap and vigor, absolutely wholesome.

Delicious—Refreshing—Thirst-Quenching

Demand the Genuine—Refuse Substitutes
THE COCA-COLA CO.
TORONTO, ONT.

Free Outset booklet, telling of Coca-Cola production at Chattanooga, for the sending.

Wherever you see an Arrow mark of Coca-Cola.

LA MARQUISE DE FONTENAY

Prince Victor Napoleon Visits France, But Authorities Close Their Eyes—Gambing Ban Lifted—Troubles of Royal Investors

(Copyright, 1912, by the Brentwood Co.)

Prince Victor Napoleon, although subject to the laws rigorously banishing him as Bonaparte Pretender from French territory, has of late been paying a number of visits to Paris, and on the last occasion made a two days' stay with M. Chasigne-Goyon, at the latter's house in the Rue de la Boetie. His host is a very wealthy member of the Municipal Council of Paris. On the day following his arrival he was present at a large dinner given in his honor by Prince and Princess Murat at their mansion in the Rue de Monceau, while in the evening he dined with the former member of the Chamber of Deputies, Gagliardi de Gagny, at Versailles, returning by automobile to Paris in order to catch the midnight train for Belgium, where he now has a large country place close to the French frontier.

The French Government has been thoroughly well aware of these visits, as was inevitable, in view of the close watch kept on his movements, while through the illustrated papers his somewhat peculiar features, bald head, and enormous moustache, are tolerably familiar to everybody. But the authorities have prudently closed their eyes to the whole affair; partly by way of showing their contempt for anything that Prince Victor can do as a pretender, and partly because they realize that to arrest him and lodge him in jail for the infraction of the law of banishment, would lend him entirely too much importance, and would also, in the eyes of some foolish people, invest him with the halo of martyrdom.

Of course there is a big difference between his case and that of the Duke of Orleans, who has always had a very large following in France, and who is the only Pretender whom the Republic seriously fears. When he made his memorable visit to France twenty odd years ago, immediately on coming of age, to present himself for that service in the army which is obligatory on all French citizens, the affair was so public that the French authorities had no alternative but to inflict the prescribed penalty upon him, compelling him to the great prison of Clairmont, where he spent six or eight months of weary captivity before the Republic raised that the best thing to do would be to restore him to liberty by a presidential decree.

The authorities were moved to this step by the discovery, somewhat late in the day, that he had impersonated the Duke of Orleans, displaying a patriotic desire to fulfill his obligations as a French citizen, by serving as a common soldier in the army. This was a common soldier in the army, was unpopular, not only among the Royalists, but among all classes of the nation. Moreover, he was a youth of a singularly charming manner, full of enthusiasm for France, and possessed of a singularly graceful and handsome presence; in short, he was a figure to appeal to the French people, offering them, as today, a striking contrast to Prince Victor Napoleon, who, stout, middle-aged, heavy and commonplace, has until now chiefly distinguished himself by the number of his falls from horseback. He has inherited none of the physical beauty of the Bonapartes, but he resembles a nineteenth century Caesar, whereas the Duke of Orleans is the living image of his famous ancestor Henry IV. of France.

Americans frequenting Carlsbad, Marienbad, and other Austrian thermal resorts, will be relieved to learn that the government has decided to apply with a far greater degree of leniency than heretofore, the laws against the playing of games of chance for money. Until now the law required that every foreigner discovered playing for money, be the stakes ever so small, should be at once expelled from the country by the police, as an objectionable alien. This was particularly trying at Carlsbad and similar resorts, owing to the frequency of rain, and the consequent difficulty of passing the time pleasantly indoors. The credit for persuading the authorities to refrain from enforcing these laws in cases where private play is concerned, is due to the Imperial Sporting Club of Carlsbad.

When monarchs invest, as so many of them do, in American railroads and other enterprises in this country, they are often bitterly criticised for using their fortunes to promote foreign instead of home industries. Blind to the fact that many of these royal and imperial personages are possessed of immense private means in addition to their civil lists, the press and public usually denounce them for employing resources drawn from the heavily burdened taxpayer, to the benefit of other countries. The Kaiser, King George, King Victor, the late King Edward, King Oscar of Sweden, and the late Frederick VIII. of Denmark, have all been subjected to this charge of abuse. Yet when any crowned head ventures to invest in native industrial, commercial or financial enterprises, he is hailed as a benefactor of his country at the expense of others, but is even accused of misusing their money, and of appropriating to promote the enterprises in which he has embarked his money.

Some two or three years ago, Prince Maximilian Puersteinberg, the principal crown and chum of the Kaiser and a multi-millionaire, founded in the city of Bremen, the Imperial German Lloyd, a syndicate, together with Prince Christian of Hohenzollern, the naval aide-de-camp of the Kaiser, and a number of other equally wealthy members of the great German nobility, in order to engage in banking business, designed to finance all sorts of important German enterprises, notably those of shipbuilding and shipowning. Among their projects was the conversion of Bremen into a great seaport for ocean liners, and the establishment of a fleet of vessels for trade with the United States and South America.

When last month, their application for a charter was turned down at once, the emperor asserted in many of the most important German papers, that the refusal was due to the personal influence of the Kaiser, owing to the fact that he had some $3,000,000 invested in the shares of the Hamburg-American and North German Lloyd lines—the natural opponents of a new shipping company. They recalled that a number of years ago one of the naval aide-de-camp of the emperor resigned that office, and went on half-pay as far as the navy was concerned, in order to accept a seat on the board of directors of the North German Lloyd. It was asserted at the time that the object of his move was to enable him to look after the Emperor's interests, as one of the biggest shareholders. Be this as it may, the Captain has long since retired from the directorate; from which it may be inferred that the Kaiser has got rid of his holdings.

The other day, on July 13 to be exact, the Berlin North-German Gazette, in an official statement, denied that the emperor possessed any shares in either the Hamburg-American or the North-German Lloyd, and added that it was ridiculous to imagine that he had favored the interests of the Free City of Hamburg at the expense of Bremen, which is situated in his own kingdom of Prussia. Indeed, this official communication implies that if he had to choose between the two, he would infinitely prefer helping Bremen. It is much more probable that the Kaiser's money was invested along with that of his friend Puersteinberg and that he, like the others, is a victim of underground influence on the part of the old-established companies, who feared the dangerous rivalry of a new concern.

Mixed Parties: A New Kind

By RUTH CAMERON

"WHEN young and old come forth to play On a sunshine holiday."—Milton.

Did it ever occur to you that there is too much segregation of ages in present-day society? It seems to me that the occasions when young and old come forth to play together are not half so common as they should be for the good of either.

The young folks have their good times, and the older folks have theirs, and very seldom does it occur to either generation that they could have a better time if they joined forces once in awhile. The mother of one of the college girls who graduated last year gave her daughter a series of parties last fall. And the list of guests comprised not only the girls of her daughter's age, but also many of these girls' mothers and of her own personal friends.

People wondered somewhat at this and the hostess said: "That is the way things should be. There are such fine personalities among the women of my age that it will do my daughter good to meet, and I want her to meet them. I think each generation looks by itself too much. It makes us both narrow to do that; we don't get each other's point of view. It does girls good to meet older women and it keeps older women young to meet young girls. Henceforth I am not going to have any special age limits for my parties. They will be made up of congenial people of every age. It is the mothers who do not have this spirit."

What a pity it is that mothers do not have this spirit. Incidentally, it should be added, these parties were a notable success. At a little informal gathering of young people which I attended the other evening, the hostess asked me to send across the street and ask the father and mother of one of the guests to come in and swell the number. These older folks were very jolly, interesting people, and let me tell you we had just about twice as good a time as they would have had if we had been alone. These are two instances where wise people on either side of the gap of years bridged it, and were rewarded by finding what a very good time one generation may have with another.

Let us have more such instances. I am sure they will be followed by more such rewards.

AS' WORN IN ENGLAND

The latest English fashion journals give confessions of extreme simplicity as here shown. The hair is parted, rolled and pulled slightly at the sides, and bound with a flat swathe such as was worn during the days of the turban head. The back is arranged in a soft knot, having the effect of being loosely and easily secured with a few shell pins.

The latest English fashion journals give confessions of extreme simplicity as here shown. The hair is parted, rolled and pulled slightly at the sides, and bound with a flat swathe such as was worn during the days of the turban head. The back is arranged in a soft knot, having the effect of being loosely and easily secured with a few shell pins.

The latest English fashion journals give confessions of extreme simplicity as here shown. The hair is parted, rolled and pulled slightly at the sides, and bound with a flat swathe such as was worn during the days of the turban head. The back is arranged in a soft knot, having the effect of being loosely and easily secured with a few shell pins.

bitterly criticised for using their fortunes to promote foreign instead of home industries. Blind to the fact that many of these royal and imperial personages are possessed of immense private means in addition to their civil lists, the press and public usually denounce them for employing resources drawn from the heavily burdened taxpayer, to the benefit of other countries. The Kaiser, King George, King Victor, the late King Edward, King Oscar of Sweden, and the late Frederick VIII. of Denmark, have all been subjected to this charge of abuse. Yet when any crowned head ventures to invest in native industrial, commercial or financial enterprises, he is hailed as a benefactor of his country at the expense of others, but is even accused of misusing their money, and of appropriating to promote the enterprises in which he has embarked his money.

Some two or three years ago, Prince Maximilian Puersteinberg, the principal crown and chum of the Kaiser and a multi-millionaire, founded in the city of Bremen, the Imperial German Lloyd, a syndicate, together with Prince Christian of Hohenzollern, the naval aide-de-camp of the Kaiser, and a number of other equally wealthy members of the great German nobility, in order to engage in banking business, designed to finance all sorts of important German enterprises, notably those of shipbuilding and shipowning. Among their projects was the conversion of Bremen into a great seaport for ocean liners, and the establishment of a fleet of vessels for trade with the United States and South America.

When last month, their application for a charter was turned down at once, the emperor asserted in many of the most important German papers, that the refusal was due to the personal influence of the Kaiser, owing to the fact that he had some $3,000,000 invested in the shares of the Hamburg-American and North German Lloyd lines—the natural opponents of a new shipping company. They recalled that a number of years ago one of the naval aide-de-camp of the emperor resigned that office, and went on half-pay as far as the navy was concerned, in order to accept a seat on the board of directors of the North German Lloyd. It was asserted at the time that the object of his move was to enable him to look after the Emperor's interests, as one of the biggest shareholders. Be this as it may, the Captain has long since retired from the directorate; from which it may be inferred that the Kaiser has got rid of his holdings.

The other day, on July 13 to be exact, the Berlin North-German Gazette, in an official statement, denied that the emperor possessed any shares in either the Hamburg-American or the North-German Lloyd, and added that it was ridiculous to imagine that he had favored the interests of the Free City of Hamburg at the expense of Bremen, which is situated in his own kingdom of Prussia. Indeed, this official communication implies that if he had to choose between the two, he would infinitely prefer helping Bremen. It is much more probable that the Kaiser's money was invested along with that of his friend Puersteinberg and that he, like the others, is a victim of underground influence on the part of the old-established companies, who feared the dangerous rivalry of a new concern.

The refusal of the charter was made, not by any particular government department at Berlin, but by the federal council of the empire, which is composed of plenipotentiaries from all the allied sovereign states comprised in the German Empire. As the ships of the proposed Emden Company were to have sailed under the flag of the empire, and the charter was to have been imperial, rather than royal and Prussian, it was necessary to have recourse to the federal council, which simply voted down Kaiser William's friends.

THE MARATHON MEET

If the first prize for the great race at Stockholm was a box of "2 in 1", how they would smash records!

"2 in 1" combines all the virtues of liquid and paste combinations with none of their faults.

2 IN 1

Shoe Polish 10c.

"2 in 1" is a paste—gives brilliant, lasting, waterproof shine that won't rub off. The best by test.

J. E. CREED—Agent for Maritime Provinces.

Dining Room Suit $49.85 9 Pieces For Only

BUFFET, Empire oak, rich golden finish, has two shaped upper drawers, two large doors, and one large linen drawer, also British Bevel Mirror. The carvings are very neat, making in all a very handsome Buffet.

CHINA CLOSET, Empire oak, golden finish, has two large glass doors and four large adjustable shelves.

DINING TABLE, Empire oak, rich golden finish. This table is round and is made in the latest pedestal style, extends over 6 feet.

DINING CHAIRS, to match suit, upholstered in art leather, has brace arms, large roomy seat. Is a strong and well built chair. We give six chairs in the set.

J. Marcus - 30 Dock Street

SHIPPING ESTIMATE OF CEREAL CROPS FOR 1912

ALMANAC FOR ST. JOHN, JULY 23.

High Tide.....4.57 Low Tide.....11.11
Sun Sets.....5.02 Sun Sets.....7.57
The time used is Atlantic standard.

PORT OF ST. JOHN.

Cleared Yesterday.

Schr Luella, 90, Scott, Bas River for Vineyard Haven 1 o—in for harbor, C M Kerrison.
Schr George Pearl, 118, Olsen, St Martin, A W Adams.
Coastwise—Stms Mikado, 48, Rolfe, Alma; Margaretville, 37, Baker, Margaretville.

Sailed Yesterday.

Star Governor Cobb, 1,556, Allan, for Boston via ports.
CANADIAN PORTS.

Quebec, July 22—Arr strs Canada, from Liverpool; Pretorian and Casandra, from Glasgow; Englishman, from Bristol.
Yarmouth, N S, July 22—Arr schr Latoka, from New York; strm Prince George, from Boston; schr Margaret G, from Parrsboro.
Old—Schr Latoka, from Wedgeport.

BRITISH PORTS.

Liverpool, July 22—Arr strm Lusitania, from New York.
Plymouth, July 22—Arr Kron Prinz Wilhelm, from New York.
Southampton, July 22—Arr strm St Louis, from New York.
London, July 21—Arr strm Aucania, from Montreal.

Lisard, July 22—Arr strm Lake Michigan, from Montreal for London.
Imithrahull, July 22—Arr strm Cairntor, from Bathurst (N B).

FOREIGN PORTS.

New York, July 22—Arr schrs Laura M Lant, from Port Daniel (Me); Lawson, from Minnsville (N S); Earl Grey, from Eatonville (N S).

Vineyard Haven, Mass, July 22—Arr schrs Roger Drury and Theres, from South Amboy; Dora C, from New York; Annie B Mitchell, from Perth Amboy.
Salem, Mass, July 22—Arr schrs Jennie A Stubbs, from Port Johnson; Peter C Schultz, from Port Reading.
Rockland, Me, July 22—Arr schr James Slater, from New York.
Calais, July 22—Arr schr Mary Crosby, from Port Reading.
Vineyard Haven, Mass, July 22—Schr Schr Wandrian, for St John.

MARINE NEWS.

Halifax, July 22—(Special)—Anxiety is felt here by the Halifax owners of the three-masted vessel Advance, which left Campbellton on June 27 with a load of lumber for St. John, as no word has been received of her whereabouts. The schooner is considered to be exceptionally fast, having made a voyage last year from Halifax to Southern Brazil in nine days.

NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE SAVES WORRY, SAVES MONEY, SAVES THE HAIR

If you want to free your head of dandruff and stop falling hair, you must soon or later resort to Newbro's Herpicide. By using Herpicide first you save your self worry, which is desirable, you save money, which is a consideration, and you save your hair, which is the most important of all.

Why not profit by the experience of Mrs. S. A. Lee, of 119 South 4th street, Richmond, Va., who writes:

"Four years' residence in India ruined my hair until it was but two inches long and very thin. I tried everything in Europe and America without benefit until I was induced to use Herpicide. My hair is now long, soft and silky and natural color, while before it was quite gray. My friends never tire of admiring my hair."

Mrs. Lee's story is a typical history of hair troubles. If everything else fails Newbro's Herpicide brings relief. It would be just as effective if used first.

Newbro's Herpicide kills the dandruff germ and prevents falling hair. It stops the itching of the scalp almost instantly. No matter what the cause of dandruff, Herpicide is the only genuine original dandruff germ destroyer.

Applications at good barber shops. Send 10c. for sample bottle to The Herpicide Co., Dept. H, Detroit, Mich.

Newbro's Herpicide in 25c. and $1.00 sizes is sold by all dealers who guarantee it to do all that is claimed. If you are not satisfied your money will be refunded.

E. Clinton Brown, Special Agent.