

candour, if while we see in ourselves so much need of a candid construction from our Brethren, that they may entertain a good opinion of us; and yet allow ourselves to make the worst of all their mistakes and imperfections. Can you remember how frankly your great creditor forgave you all that debt which you owed him: and then with a heart full of gratitude to the Redeemer; lay hands on a fellow servant, and demand restitution. We do not wish you to wink at sins, but as individuals, we wish you to encourage that temper which esteemeth others, better than ourselves.

But again. There is another duty you owe as those who are blest with; and interested in; the Gospel of Christ. That is, that you would not forget those who are destitute of the blessings you enjoy: there are many settlements in Nova-Scotia and New-Brunswick, whose inhabitants are perishing for lack of knowledge: and although it may need a little of your worldly substance, to supply them with the preached word; yet that is the least you can bestow: and be assured, that you cannot apply it in this way, but it will yield you an abundant crop; for "the blessing of him that was ready to perish will come upon you." You have done something in this way already, and we beg you not to be weary in well doing: you pray that his Kingdom may come; you call the gifts and send them forth to preach that Kingdom: but you must be like the zealous Jews in the days of Nehemiah: say "arise for this matter belongeth unto thee; we also will be with thee; be of good courage and do it," your Missionaries have often brought us good tidings that even their enemies became subject to them through the word of God's grace. And if we could think you needed any excitement in this particular, we would remind you of the many happy effects, which have crowned Missionary exertions; we would invite you to consider the desolate state of our fellow men on the Northern and Southern shores; you may view the lonely and scanty dwellings in the wilderness, and you would see the joy and delight beaming in the countenance of its wretched inhabitants at the sight of a Missionary: you should see the tear of gratitude at parting; and hear their earnest request, do come and see us again; do tell the association, we can never thank them enough for sending the Gospel amongst us. Dear Brethren, we invite you to come and share a part in this glorious triumph, for

we are sure
efforts to en
failing God;
in pieces an
tian must no
until the bat
cruelty are th
shall possess t
ing Pagados
shod with th
all the idolat
standard of th
die away befo
great promisi
doing. And
give you acce
the Gate into

*The Ministers an Brunswick Bap
ing every Hea*

DEAR BRE

THROUGH
in Affoci
pect of Imman
tensive plains,
barren waste, th
rejoice in the p
by the united e
of the world, w
have visited the
with the good n