JOE MUISSE, THE INDIAN GUIDE.

Chief Clark last evening informed the Sun that he had telegraphed to the chief of Nova Scotia, is at present in Digby, and has not seen his son where it was thought perhaps Muisse have accompanied him, have gone to Nova Scotia, as the officers of the steamer Yarmouth are quite positive that no persons answering their description crossed the bay on the

This estimate of Muisse's character is confirmed by Charles A. Clarke, who has known Muisse for many years, and who thinks most highly of him.

Speaking to the Sun about the matter, Mr. Clarke recalled one occasion when Muisse was doing some work for him in the city, which could not be finished in time for the guide to go home the same evening. He only consented stay over night on condition that Mr. Clarke telephone his wife, giving the reasons of his continued absence Mr. Clarke is much worried over the guide's disappearance, and thinks the police should make greater efforts than
