Stage—Belief Now That
Settlement of Home Rule
Question is in Sight in View of the Threatened Blaze in Ulster.

London, July 1.—When the bill to amend the Irish home rule bill came up today for second reading in the House of Lords, the Marquis of Lansdowne, the Unionist leader, announced that as Ireland was one vast armed camp it was necessary to find a way out of the calamity which was threatening. The Unionists therefore, he said, would give the amending bill a second reading and introduce amendments during the committee stage in regard to the area to be excluded from the operations of the home rule bill, the duration of the exclusion, and the government of the excluded area. The Unionists, he concluded, would not agree to the second reading of the home rule bill itself. Lord Lansdowne added that their action in passing the second reading of the amending bill would be misunderstood and misrepresented in many quarters, but there was no other way by which the country could be saved, with the prospect of averting the horrors of civil war. The amendments to be introduced in the committee stage would be directed solely to amend the bill to a really adequate exclusion bill.

With a touch of pathos he said: "The peers are so fast bound by the meshes of the parliament act that there is no other course open to them which would be likely to prove effective."

Most of the other speakers were equally conciliatory. The only notable exception was Lord Wiltshire, who moved the rejection of the bill. The Archbishop of York, who was asked what the country wanted, was not an election but a settlement in some form. Irish self-government, he declared, was now inevitable. He could not vote against the second reading because it would be in violation of the oath of the Ulster covenants.

Byrne's Cause of a Settlement.

Lord Byrne, in the course of the debate, expressed the belief that the Unionist cause could be maintained. He admitted that some form of exclusion was necessary, but declared that he did not attach much importance to the time of the exclusion.

A rumor was current today that 50,000 rifles had been landed on the coast of County Mayo. The rumor, however, was not confirmed.

Lords in Conciliatory Mood.

London, July 2.—The precise effect of the house of lords proposed amendments to the government's amending bill will not be known until the home rule bill is brought to the committee stage next week, but favorable omens are drawn by the leading morning newspapers on the conciliatory tone of the speeches on both sides of the house.

Lord Lansdowne, in his speech, declared that the government's amending bill was a concession to the Unionist cause.

Judge Angers Noble Lord.

The cantonade, which culminated last May in the conviction of nine British army officers and eight civilian employees of Lipton's, Limited, on the charge of being implicated in a conspiracy to offer of accept bribes in connection with the allotment of army contracts, had an echo in the House of Lords today.

Lord Sore and Selk, formerly lieutenant colonel of the Royal Scots Fusiliers and now controller of the King's Household, said the charge of tampering with the allotment of army contracts was a serious one.
