

itor. "Come into the house, sir," he said, hospitably. "I can leave these birds now. Perhaps the time won't seem so long if you are looking at grandfather's books."

Mr. Hittaker did not care for reading. The most interesting books to him were account books. However, he followed Titus willingly enough.