OUR FREE RURAL DELIVERY DEBATING SOCIETY

Interested in Free Delivery

Editor.—The Dairyman and Farming World—I have been much interested in the Free Rural Mail Delivery articles that have appeared in your paper and hope that you will keep at it until we have the system in Canada. I see that Postmaster General Lemieux has given the rate of one cent on letters to be delivered in cities, where they now have free delivery once and twice a day. This one cent reduction is a piece of legislation in favor of the cities as against the country, and I, for one, protest against such legislation. If we are going to have the one cent rate on drop letters in cities, why not have it in all parts of Canada? This, however, is in keeping with the bungling of papers and magazines between Canada and the United States.—F. Van de Bogert, Lennox and Addington Co., Ont.

Bound to Come

The Dairyman and Farming World is to be commended on the stand it has taken with regard to the Free Rural Mail Delivery question. Free Rural Mail Delivery is something that the farmers of this district are demanding and it is something that we are bound to have before long. It is a convenience in towns and cities, where people are within a few blocks of a post office. It is an absolute necessity with the farmer.

The farmer is not a man who works for wages. He is a man who buys and sells, or in other words, a business man. To make his business a success, he must keep in close touch with the outside world, and be able to tell at any time what demand there is for his produce, and what prices they will bring on the market. The city business man receives his mail from three to six times a day. Why should the country business man have to be content with his mail once or twice a week, and then have to drive from two to five miles for it? It will no doubt cost a little more were we to have Rural Free Delivery, but it will prove a profitable investment in the end. Not only will there be an actual money saving, in the time formerly occupied in going for the mail every few days, and in many ways in which it means money to a farmer through knowing the condition of the market, but it is worth something when one comes in at night, tired from the day's work, to be able to sit down and read the morning paper, or possibly a letter from a distant friend, instead of having either to go without, or spend an hour going for it.

In our neighborhood, it would be a simple matter to lay out a route of about 20 miles, which would reach from 75 to 100 farmers. The majority of these farmers now receive their mail only once or twice a week, and have to drive from two to five miles to get it. A great saving would be effected were we to have the mail delivered right to our doors. The rural telephone is an established fact. The farmers have recognized the need of it, and have set about securing it for themselves. With the Rural Free Delivery, however, it is different. This is something which must be secured from the government, and the sooner the government realizes that we want it, the sooner we will get it. I am glad to see The Canadian Dairyman and Farming World has taken hold of this matter so vigorously, and wish you every success.—C. H. Frederick, Victoria Co., Ont.

Making Extra Money

It is easy to make a little extra money if spare moments are used to good advantage. Many of our readers have found this to be true, and are making money easily by obtaining new subscriptions to The Canadian Dairyman and Farming World. Mr. E. J. Duff, Northumberland County, sent us thirty-six new subscriptions this week.

Mr. Duff says: "Enclosed find 36 new subscriptions, with money order to cover same. I intend to send 14 more subscriptions, and thereby win the cash prize of $35."

Even if Mr. Duff does not send the remaining subscriptions, he has made $18.

This is not the first prize Mr. Duff has won by working for The Canadian Dairyman and Farming World. He certainly is a hustler. Mr. Fred A. Sweet, Huntingdon County, Quebec, has this week won a Yorkshire boar by sending us eight new subscriptions.

Don't you think that it would pay you to do a little hustling, and turn your spare time into cash?

A very encouraging letter reached us this week from Mr. Walter Bowron, Wentworth County. Mr. Bowron says: "I have been reading your journal but one month, and I have noticed with much satisfaction that it is directed with intelligence and ability and that it strenuously defends the rights of the farmer, and, at the same time, endeavors to promote the best interests of the country. I believe that it will continue to do much good."

Mr. Charles Lackington, Peterboro County, says: "I read your paper and think it is fine. I like very much to be reading it. I think that I will be able to send you some new subscriptions."

Mr. William J. Bald, Perth County, says: "I am now receiving The Canadian Dairyman and Farming World, and consider it to be a valuable paper."

Mr. T. Smith, Alberta, says: "Please send me a copy of your paper. We are looking for one which will be helpful to the patrons of our creamery. Your paper was recommended to me."

Mr. Amos Watson, Middlesex County, says: "It is only about two weeks since I first saw a copy of your paper, and I think it is one which every farmer should take."

Mr. R. A. Foley, Rockfield, Ont., who recently won a setting of eggs, says: "I received the eggs from the party named in your letter. Everything O. K."

Mr. George Preston, York County, says: "Enclosed find my renewal to The Canadian Dairyman and Farming World. I cannot afford to lose one copy of your paper. Since the change it has been much improved. I consider it one of the cheapest and best farm papers in Canada."

I live six miles east of Hamilton, on the lake shore, and have not even a post office, the farmers here not having been able to get one. The Rural delivery service would be just the thing we want. If some none of the leading papers would also take up the good work, it would be some.—Walter Bowron, Wentworth Co., Ont.

HELD BY THE ENEMY

Old foggy ways are the enemy of progress and thrift. Old cans and pans and inferior skimming methods keep a tight hold of the smaller butter-fat globules. . . . You lose that way.
