

"Then I'll come. It's a pity I have to gang doonstairs, but it canna' be helpit." "My dear Deb," said Mona, sitting down again to some work which the ar-rival had interrupetd, "I am afraid Uncle Sandy will be something like Sinbad's Old Man of the Sea. You have under-taken a rather heavy task; it seems to for, and be everything to, him." "Well, well, Mona, you would not be cold and heartless to your poor father's only surviving brother. The poor old me that he expects us to do creation in any way in the could expect. He spore that the spore that is the could and heartless to your poor father's only surviving brother. The poor old gentleman is worn out with fatigue and suffering; he will be more merciful and more reasonable to morrow. You would not refuse to goothe the declining years of a poor, lonely man?" way is a poor of a poor, lonely man?

"No, I will gladly help him in any way I can; but he may be rather a worry. I can; but he may be rather a worry. However, he seems something of a char-acter, and may develop attractive qual-ities. I am quite sure my father was never like him! Could you fancy a high-born, handsome girl running away with Uncle Sandy at any period of his life?" Mme. Debrisay laughed heartily. 'Ah! Mona, you are a quare girl!" When madame was thoroughly off her guard and speaking English, her native accent made itself heard occasionally. In ccent made itself heard occasionally. In French she was fluent, with a pure Par-isian pronunciation, which was valuable to her in her professional capacity. From the date of Uncle Sandy's settlement the partners felt that the freedom of their holiday was over. He unhesitat-ingly claimed constant help and atten-tion. Moreover, he cavilled at the price paid for everything they bought, and many were the commissions he gave

Still Madame Debrisay clung to the idea that he was a millionaire, though she carefully kept her impression to her-self.

• 41t is only the rich who are so sav-ing," she said to Mrs. Puddiford, with whom she often condescended to talk. "He always has money enough for whatever he wants." "I don't think he is so had as he seems, ma'am," returned the landlady. "He comes downstairs a good bit faster "Oh, he is far from strong, I assure you. Indeed, I dont' think he is long for this world." 'Don't you, now, ma'am? Well, J don't know, I am sure." From the beginning, Uncle Sandy, on finding that madame had the Times every morning for an hour, proposed to share the subscription and the perusal tion ?" "You'll no care to read much of it;"

"You'll no care to read much of it;" '' '' '' Ay, that you may. It's in he said, 'and it will lighten the expense to you. Then I get the 'Scotsman,' and you are welcome to that when I have doen with it". '' '' '' '' Ay, that you may. It's in my parritch every morn to my break-fast, I'll be anither mon. I have wanted done with it." it sore.'

"Oh, my Jear Mr. Craig. I read my Madame scarcely waited the permis-Times right through in holiday time. sion before she pounced upon the jar When I am offearly to my work, I get which had often puzzled her, and examit in the evening. Now I would advise ined it carefully sidet he fender. "Come your ways," he cried. "The sight of you is good for sair een nawa-days! Have ye had your bite? Ay? Then we'l have a good spell o' the papers before bedtime. But, first, there's a bit note I want to write to a laddie I have perfected in a way-my siter's son Kenneglected in a way—my sister's son, Ken-beth Macalister. He is in an office in the ty—a big place—doin' well, I believe." "A nephew of yours?"

"Ay, a nephew" (he pronounced it "nay-few). "He used to come and see me there in Camden Town. But he and Jamie Black—the lad I shared the lodg-ing with—used to make a noise, and ar-gue, and go on wi' fules' talk, till I said

gue, and go on wi' fules' talk, till I said I would not put up wi' it. And Kenneth —he had a Hielandman's temper—he got offended. Noo, he has come back from his holiday, and is clothed (I daur say he left off the breeks when he went home) and in his right mind. So he writes for leave to come and see me. He writes for leave to come and see me. He is a gude laddie, in a way-not varra weel informed; but every one hasn't had opportunitics, nor have they striven to cdicate themselves as I have, though my disadvantages have been great. Noo, my hand is very shaky the night, so you write for me, my dear-ie. Tell him to come early to kirk here bye, neext Sawbath, and come back with me to a bit dinner. Madame will let us dine with you-have a joint, or some-His greatest enjoyment was to listen nis greatest enjoyment was to isten to Mona reading the papers to him-next to her playing Scotch airs. He would listen to no other music save a few hymns or psalms. He was very par-ticular there are been a set of the set of the set of the time of the set of the ticular about attending public worship, and insisted occasionally on Mona ac-companying him, that she might hear "soond doctrine." Which was a great punishment, for he was exceedingly re-ligious in a docmatic act of the source of the sour thing a hungry laddie can cut from and come again. She'll tell me my share. Give him a bottle of beer. We'll say nawthing about the drap whisky—it's no that good for a young mon, and I haven's much left." publishment, for ne was exceedingly re-ligious, in a dogmatic and disagreeable fashion. Mme. Debrisay had skillfully and gracefully glided out of a proposal on his part to share their midday dinner, on his part to share their midday dinner, paying his proportion. "It would be very nice, my dear Mr. Craig," she said; "but you see you might regret beginning what you could not continue; for when families return to town, and we begin to be busy, we often do not dine at all, and always ir reculcify. That would near suit your haven's much left." "Very well, uncle. How shall I be-gin ? I never met this young man, who is, I suppose, my cousin ?" "Not all out. My mither was twice married, and Kenneth's mither was twice married, and Kenneth's mither was my half-sister; still, he is a near kinsman." "I will write as if from you. Tell me what to say, and you can sign the let-tor." regularly. That would never suit your ter.' "Varra weel,"

"That's well thought," said Uncle Sandy, gravely. "My food must be punc-tual, or I canna live." "It is Indeed of the last importance." "I am surprised," he resumed. "to find how far Londoners are behind in the mething. I bught a small A very few lines sufficed; a few dir-ections as to trains were added, and the note was ready for signature. "I went you to be kind and friendly to the laddie. You and he are all that's the matter of cooking. I bought a small the matter of cooking. I bought a small bag of oatmeal, thinking I could get 'parritch' to my breakfast, and I went to the cost of an earthen pan to pit it in; but, eh, sirs, what a fearsome-like mess the landlady in yon house made of it. I've not had the courage to ask for it main"

"Porridge," cried Mme. Debrisay, joy-ously. "My dear Mr. Craig, if I had had the faintest idea what the contents of that crock were, you should have had She took up the paper and read per-severingly, until her uncle, consulting his watch, decided it was time to go to bed. The following Sunday was dull and your porridge every day. I am to the manner born. We have the same thing by another name in my country. May I see the oatmeal if it is in good condi-

The following Sunday was dull and gray, but dry. Mr. Craig sometimes hobbled to the "kirk" alone, when Mona struck and in-sisted on attending her own place of wor-ship, much to his annoyance. On the present occasion she started early, to reach a distant church, think-ing that dinner-time and the whole af-ternoon would be a sufficient sacrifice ternoon would be a sufficient sacrifice to her newly found cousin.

ms all right," she said trium

voices in the next room-the polite, and course. uarded tones of Mme. Debrisay, told It is not, however, so have heard something of Waring without asking directly. And how delightful it would have been to see Evelyn once "What'll ye tak'?" asked Mr. Craig, presently; "beer or wine ?" "Neither, sir. I drink only water and a drop of whiskey sometimes. Wine is rather indifferent in London"-this The days had shortened considerably

THE ATEENS REPORTER MAY 30. 1906

The young Highlander would have let any amount of forces gnaw his vitals be-fore he would confees that he was al-most a total abstainer, from motives of

"It's no an indifferent price, then,"

The days had shortened considerably, and the night had grown sharp and chill. Mr. Craig was painfully early both in rising and retiring. He was rarely out of bed at nine in winter or ten in sum-mer; and being unable to get out of doors as much as in the fine early su-tumn days, was rathen more exacting and troublesome. Mona found reading aloud more of a tax after teaching than it had seemed in her holiday time, but she rare-ly disappointed her uncle; when too tired Mme. Debrisay supplied her place. But he never approved the change. "I don't know how it is, but for all I try, I don't think your uncle loves a bone in my skin. Never mind, so long as he is good to you, and remembers you, I am content." "It's no an indifferent price, then," grumbled Uncle Sandy. "We find a very tolerable light claret at fifteen shillings a dozen," remarked Mme. Debrisay. "I fancy it might suit you, Mr. Craig, for a little change." "Aye, but I dinna want a change. Good cold water is the best of all, only I am forced to qualify it now and again wi'a drap of whiskey, which I tak' medicin-ally, you understand." "Have you been long in London?" ask-ed Mona. "Going on three years; before that I was in a Glasgow house." "And you like-London better than Glasgow?"

"He ought to be very grateful to you, Deb, for all you have done for him." "Ah, my dear! very few men have any gratitude to bestow." These words were exchanged as Mona was about to ascend to her uncle's sitting room, where she found him sitting over the fire, his feet on a hassock placed in-cidet he forder. "And you nke sondon better than Glasgow?" "I hated both; but I am getting used to London; there is much to be done and learned here." "It is a wonderful place. Do you often

"It is a wonderful place. Do you orten go to the theatre?" "Scarce ever. I am tired after the day's work; and in summer I would ra ther take a row on the river." "The young are aye carried awa' w? an inordinate love of amusement, an'-an 'excitement, in these latter days." "Man sennot live by bread alone." said "Man acmot live by bread alone," said Macalister, gravely. "Man wants food for imagination and wonder, and—and for imagination and wonder, and—and self-improvement." "It ill becomes the son of a God-fear-in' minister to be quoting Scripture for his ain weak purposes," observed Uncile Sandy, reprovingly. "I will na hear it, and it makes me in dread for your im-mortal soul when I do."

(To be continued.)

Well-Known J. P. is Cured of Kidney Trcuble of Long Standing by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Banda, Ont., May 21 .-- (Special.)-There is no one more widely knonw and highly respected in this section of the country than Wm. Bell, Esq., J. P., and the statement he makes below concern-the statement he makes below concern-ing his cure by Dodd's Kidney Pills bears weight and carries conviction with it. "For more than a year I was a sufferer from kidney trouble," Mr. Bell says, "Always in pain, at times the agony would become unendurable, and I was practically unable to attend to any of my duties. I doctored with several my duties. I doctored with several ocal physicians and tried every means to get cured, but without success. At last I was induced to give Dodd's Kid-ney Pills a trial. I have the greatest pleasure in stating that they drove away the pains entirely and restored me to my old time health and strength. I am sure I owe this entirely to Dodd's Kidney Pils."

SCHOOLS IN GERMANY.

Special Branches Cultivated With Regard to Local Interests.

The ten technical universities of the Empire, called in German, high schools, enrolling over 17,000 students, are in close touch with, and a great help to, the industries, says the Engineering Magazine. In several cases they cultivate special branches with regard to local interests. For instance, the school in Dresden being near a great textile district, has a course in the technics of dyeing. The Aix-la-Chapelle sohool being so near the coal fields and iron works, has especially good courses in mining and metallurgy. Danzig includes marine engineering of course though to her newly found cousin. She was a little late in returning and went at once to lay aside her out-door garments. While doing so, the sound of department, and Munich an agricultural

much in

(T. F. Manning, in the London Daily Mail.) A thoughtful pathologist, every time he walks abroad in London, must be amazed at the number of avenues of dis-iase he finde medicentie left every dis-tions and the number of avenues of dis-tions and the number of avenues of dis-tions are the statement of the number of avenues of dis-tions are the statement of the number of avenues of dis-tions are the statement of the number of avenues of dis-tions are the statement of the number of avenues of dis-tions are the statement of the number of avenues of dis-tions are the statement of the number of avenues of dis-tions are the statement of avenues of dis-tions are

it. The malady ran a short course, was cured, and left traces behind. In New York a series of two hundred and thirty post-mortems revealed marks of consumption.

The conclusion from this evidence is that at least half the dwellers in cities are attacked, at one time or another, by consumption severe enough to destroy part of the lung tissue. It is not un-likely that the germs find their way into the lungs of every inhabitant. But the only measure so far taken against this terrible scourge consists of a by-law against spitting in public places, a by-law, too, which is not enforced as it should be. This is not the measure called for by the circumstances. We need a by-law forbidding expectora-well known that the germs of several infectious diseases cling to walls and floors for years. These are showered upon pedestrians in almost every thor oughfare all through the spring and sum-mer. And, considering the millions of streets is another matter demanding at- dicates, might easily be caused by the tention. Surely this operation should process. The imagination does not re-be carried out at the back of the house. onire to be stretched very far to realize

A choognitum pathologist, every time he walks abroad in London, must be marked at the number of avenues of disease. The finds negligently left open by those who have the care of the people's the set of the number of adult of the people's while the difficult problem of the pre-lement of education. A measure regulating the size of bedrooms, for instance, might be resisted as violating the size of bedrooms, for instance, might be resisted as violating the size of bedrooms, for instance, might be resisted as violating the size of bedrooms, for instance, might be resisted as violating the size of bedrooms, for instance, might be resisted as violating the size of bedrooms, for instance, might be resisted as violating the size of bedrooms, for instance, might be resisted as violating the size of bedrooms of London.
We may take it that ten thousand deaths involve a loss of two and a half millions sterling, and that one millon cases of illness, great and little, cost the community a further eight or ten miltion pounds. Taking into account this is a moderate estimate.
Could the authorities save ten thour value of the human working machine this is a moderate estimate.
To be trusted, this would be done by attent on to the matter of dust alone.
From dust we get consumption of the lust of rooms, churches, railwy stations, etc., but, perhaps, mainly from the dust of streets. Very few people now dead would be alive but for their daily journey by train and comilius and overcrowded railway carriage not only is the air foul and poisonous from the presence of carbonic acid, but it is invariably laden with the germs of disease. One might successfully battle against these in pure air, but in foul air they for a ming and it. The malady ran a short course, was cured, and left traces behind. In New York a series of two hundred and this?

measurably better than when he drives. This is due as much to escape from the foul air as it is to the exercise. Why

This is due as much to escape from the foul air as it is to the exercise. Why can we not have a by-law to ensure the proper ventilation of all public vehicles and another to prevent their overcrowd-ing. At present, in most of these things we have discussed, our authorities lag behind those of America and Holland. Why? Life is surely the most precious of our possession, and its preservation is more important than paving and light-

MEDICINE FOR CHILDREN.

A medicine which keeps babies and children well, or restores them to health We need a by-law forbidding expectora-children well, or restores them to health tion in the streets, such as they have in some American cities. Sir Michael Fos-ter once said that if all tuberculous ani-own Tablets. These tablets cure all mals used for food were destroyed, and stomach and bowel troubles, allay the if all spitting by phthisical patients pain of teething, and give sound, healthy, were prevented, tuberculous would be refreshing sleep. And the mother has the banished from the land. If the first of these measures is not practicable, the this medicine does not contain one par-second is surely worth trying, with the ticle of the poisonous opiates found in promise of such a happy issue. Street so-called soothing mixtures and most ticle of the poisonous opiates found in promise of such a happy issue. Street so-called soothing mixtures and most dust, however, is harmful in many ways. It swarms with disease germs. There good for the new born baby or the well street dust is the chief cause of the common cold. We are also much in need of a by-law compelling house wreckers to water buildings in course of demolition. It is well known that the germs of several infectious diseases cling to walls and

Perils Lurk in the Clothes Brush. oughare all through the sping and sum mer. And, considering the millions of people pass while any one house is be-ing pulled down, it is safe to declare that the building operations of London deal sickness or death to thousands. The brushing of dusty cloths in the posed to cleanly sentiment, apart alto-gether from the evil of health which, as the bacteriology of dust distinctly in-treate is another matter demanding at distances microte easily be caused by the The brushing of dusty cloths in the quire to be stretched very far to realize that the clothes brush might be easily

ing, or even rate-collecting.

read it quietly in the evening. You might sell the papers after for waste, you know.

Uncle Sandy thought this "varra wise like." He then discovered that his eyes were uncommon weak of late, and he asked either Mona or Mme. Debrisay to read to him, which they rarely refused to do. Next he took it into his head that he would like to "do" London under he would like to Mona's guidance. This was rather a toildertaking, for it was just "sin-" in his mind to hire a cab; fu waste' and getting him in and out of omnibuses was no slight undertaking, to say noth-ing of a running fire of disputes with conductors, and laborious studying of the fares painted inside, while the ve 'stopped the way" to a crowd of carts, hansoms, and vans.

Then Uncle Sandy, though confessing , loudly his consciousness or inferiority owing to his few opportunities, or "priowing to his lew opportunities of the second ceedingly contradictory. He would even question the dates given by the cleri-cal verger who lectured on the chapels in Westminster Abbey, and keep a whole party waiting, impervious to the dis-gust of his learned interlocutor. He did not grow angry, or excited, he sim-ply slowly asserted his own views, with-out the slightest regard to the mental ory. These qualities rendered him ceedingly contradictory. He would ply slowly asserted his own views, with-out the slightest regard to the mental condition of his opponent—exciting irritable people a wild desire to seize him by the throat and give him a silencing squeeze. With all his peculiarities, there a certain originality in Uncle Sandy which attracted Mona. Although was rigid in paying whatever he be was rigid in paying whatever he believed he ought to pay. Nor was he con-scious of exacting more than he gave. Still his recognition of the rights of others was by not means so clear as his perception of his own. But what attracted his niece most was his strong tracted his nicce most was his sector. His affection on herself, he have and tound some one to share his home and bis affection on hersen, he have and tound some one to share his home and his affection on hersen, he have tound some one to share his home and his affection on hersen, he have tound some one to share his home and his affection on hersen, he have saved him. It had been a cruel disappointment it have been a cruel disappointment when she came near him; and occasion-ally the appellation 'my dearie" came to his lips unconsciously. He even re-marked with reluctant admiration, that she read varra clear and distinct for a Southron lassie. "No but ye show your Scotch blood," he would add, "both by your working independent for your phantly. "Let me take it away and keep it for you." "Ay, so you may, only be sparing; for when that is gone, it will be troublesome and 'expenseeve' to get mair frae Scot-land." "I assure ou. Mr. Craig, you can get very article you require better in Lon-every article you require better in L don than anywhere else." "But not oatmeal, I'm thinking."

"Yes, even oatmeal; and I will prove it to you.' 'Aweel, you're a clever woman; but I doubt if ye can manage that."

"Madame bore away the "crock" in tri umph, and informed Mona she had found a new way to the old man's heart. Nevertheless, he did not swallow Mme Debrisay with the porridge made by her fair hands. He appreciated it, however, and thanketic mouth, with somewhet down-curved corners, unmasked by mustache, and deep red-brown complexion. ed her with more gratitude than he ally evinced. Naturally the holiday enjoyments of "This is Kenneth Macalister-you ousin Kenneth," quoth Mr. Craig, as ne tucked a napkin under his chin Mona howed and smiled but Macalia er took a large stride forward, holding out a big, bony, brown hand, and redden ing as he exclaimed— "I am very"—he said "ferry"—"glad to make your acquaintance." There was a certain dignity in his car riage, but Mona saw that he was shy, though probably his pride was strong to aid him in concealing it. She put her hand into his, saying pleasantly—

"It seems wonderful to me to dine with an uncle and a cousin. I have always seemedd enuded of near relatives." "Ah, but you have plenty!" said Mac allister, taking his seat. "I have twenty.

seven first cousins on my father's side and fourteen on my mother's. I have more than double that in second cousins but having been much from home I can not count all my far-away kin." He spoke with the soft, slow Highland the hall-mark of merit. Through all this time Mona thought often and sadly of the paragraph which-described Leslie Warng's supposed losses. She did not exactly believe that disap-pointed love had driven him to seek dis-traction in play; but had he not wasted his affection on herself, he might have found some one to share his home and his lots and earc for anythe writh the set ccent, which must be imagined. "Why, that is an awful army of rela-ves. Life would be too short to know ives.

hem all." "We were once a powerful tribe." h "Hoot, man! eat your dinner and din na fash us wi' your auld-warld stories." said Unde Sandy, as he received a tempting slice from a plump leg of Welsh mutton.

"I did not mean to weary you!" exclaimed Macallister, with a quick con-traction of the brows; and silence reign-ed till the first pangs of hunger were ap-ber that she was receiving company. Dinner was being placed on the table when she entered. Uncle Sandy had alhighest categories of education that we are likely to be surprised in our German observations, but rather in the be ready taken his place, and Mme. Debri-say was in the act of gracefully indicatwildering list of middle and lower schools. The most wonderful thing about these is their ingenious adapta ing his scat to a young man—a young man whose appearance startled Mona. Hearing Uncle Sandy always speak of bility to all hours of the day, to all ages, occupations, and grades of prepar-ation. Even housemaids, butlery and chimney sweeps may receive in special schools all the correct fundamental pre-paration for their humble careers. The fact that a boy or girl has laft the comhis "nay few" as a "laddie." she uncon sciously formed a picture of an under sized, shy lad, slight and insignificant, with the family "reed heeid"-something in style between a shop-boy and an errand-boy. She actually beheld a very fact that a boy or girl has left the com In style between a shop-boy and an er-rand-boy. She actually beheld a very tall, well-built figure, surmounted by an exceedingly black head, the hair short and thick; heavy dark eyebrows, and large, dark, deep-set, flashing eyes; an aquiline nose; high check bones; a path-atic month with comparison down surved

mon schools and taken employment, is by no means an indication that the school days are over; on the contrary, the day's occupation creates interest fo the evening courses in the "continua-tion" schools. In some of the schools harges are made, others are free Some are supported by the state, some by the city, others by employers' guilds in var-ious branches of business, and others by private funds. Some of the schools re eive support from all these sources.

STORY OF BURDETT-COUTTS.

Interesting Woman is Now 92 Years 01d.

The Baroness Burdett-Coutts kept her inety-second birthday the other day at her London house.

She received, as usual, an enormous number of telegrams and letters of con-gratulations and bouquets of flowers. ratulations and bouquets of flowers. It was of the Baroness Burdett-Coutts we saw there was a slight improve-ment. The improvement gradually began more marked, and by the time that the King once remarked: "After my mother, she is the most remarkable wo-man in England." - She is still the most she had taken twenty-one boxes cure was complete. It is now months since she took the pills, philanthropic woman in the world, and at 92 gives all her charities her personal atshe is now as well as she ever was

The story of her accession to a fortune unning into the millions at the age of not speak too highly in favor of Dr. and goes to school every day. I can-not speak too highly in favor of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, for I feel they sav-ed my little girl's life." Watery blood is the cause of over half the sickness which prevails to-day. To have health strength and running into the millions at the age of 23, her long spinsterhood, and her romantic marriage late in life to Ashmead hardet, who took her name, is too well known to need retelling. Her activity is the wonder of every ne who knows her. She still takes long drives every day. She enjoys the friendship of half the this rich, red blood, trat is why they celebrities in Europe. The late Duchess of Teck was one of her closest friends, and Prince Francis of Teck is the Baroness' godson.

Most of the contemporaries of her youth have now passed away, but her interests are so varied that she is continually making new friends. Co., Drockville, Ont.

DEATH SEEMED NEAR.

Three Doctors Baffled But Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Came to the Rescue.

nsible for the dissemination of dis ease. Dust is rarely if ever. free from micro-organisms and among them pathogenic entities have been recognized. Dust is, in fact, an enemy to the human race, a vehicle of disease, and should everywhere and on every occasion, howeve Just a few months ago the home trifling, be prevented as far as means can be employed to that end.

of Mr. James Beers, of Emerson, N. B., was filled with sorrow. It seemed The clothes brush is a vigorous dust the life of producing agent, and since its application To-day this is indispensable it should be used in a The little manner as far as possible consistent that death would claim the life that death would entitle the first of the of with hygenic requirements. Clothes, of bright, active and happy. Dr. Wil-liams' Pink Pills brought this change after three doctors had failed. Con-cerning this illness and cure, Mrs. Beers says: "At the age of six my little girl became very ill. At different the beating of carpets remote, as they hitte gri became very in. Yet and a should be, from human habitation, so half three doctors treated her with-out benefit. She was terribly run, down, an her blood was nothing but room, relegated to the brushing of capter of the brushing of capter of the brushing of the brushing of the best relation of the brushing o no doubt, suggest that provision might also be made for trapping the dust by uch too small for her. Her legs To make her torture To make her torture and feet were nearly twice their nasome such simple measure as suspending a damp sheet across the room. The daily clothes have a large capacity and a sintural size. worse rheumatism set in. was pitiable. Sometimes we thought she could not live much longer and for three months she could not walk gular affinity for dust, which may con-tain the seeds of a common cold or a sore throat, or even of blood poisoning and for three months she could not walk a step. To touch her was to cause her the greatest agony. The doctors were baffled-they could do nothing for her, and as a last resort we began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. She took the pills several weeks, when the use of the pills several weeks, when tetanus, so that the suggestion that the clothes brush should be handled in a less indiscriminate way than is usually the case can hardly be regarded as chimer-ical. If dust has been proved to be path-ogenic the scattering of it broadcast by ogenic the scattering of it broadcast by means of the clothes brush must be a violation of hygenic principles. The brushing of clothes is, in fact a clumsy and an unsanitary procedure, which might with advantage be superseher and ded by some more effectual and less of-fensive method. The use of some kind of vacuum brush for the purpose would sanitarily speaking, be ideal. —From the Lancet.

A cartman of Dunfanaghy, County Donegal, has been fined one shilling and happinese, you must have rich, red blood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills make sentenced to jail for a week for having his name and address printed on his cart in the Irish language. The case is be-fore the Court of King's Bench on apcure anaemia, indigestion, loss of appe-tite, rheumatism, neuralgia, nervous troubles, heart palpitation and all the peal, and the issue to be passed upon ailments peculiar to growing girls and women. Sold by dealers in medicine or by mail at 50c. a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine is whether Irish is a legal language not. In the matter of addresses on let-ters it has been decided that an address written in Irish must also be given in English translation on the envelope.