THE DEPARTMENT OF LABOR.

The Postmaster-General's Conciliation Act provides for the establishment of a Department of Labor with a view to the dissemination of accurate statistical and other information relating to the conditions of labor. The department is to collect, digest and publish, in suitable form, statistical and other information relating to such conditions. It will also institute and conduct inquiries into important, industrial questions upon which adequate information may not at present be available. It will also issue , at least once every month, a publication to be known as the Labor Gazette, which shall contain information re garding conditions of the labor market and kindred subjects.

There is nothing very novel in these provisions. There are in England and the United States, under the same or different names, state agencies of similar kind for the same purposes. The objects aimed at are highly useful and their influence will be far-reaching. The collection and collation, in a concise form, of facts and figures relating to the industrial life of the people, and the dissemination of these at home and abroad, will provide a basis for the formation of sound opinions in regard to Canada as a field of labor and a labor market. The new department will not, it seems, as in some countries, be a separate department of government, or involve a new ministerial portfolio. It will be attached to some existing department whose head shall be charged with its administration. Its mouthpiece will be the Gazette which, following the lines of the British Labor Gazette, will register facts and not enunciate opinions. The Gazette is intended to furnish the material upon which readers may form opinions for themselves. The conducting of inquiries in to industrial questions of one kind or another will, it is expected, aid the carrying out of the Conciliation clauses of the act, and, in the collection of evidence, will either superseda or supplement, to a large extent, the more expensive processes by commission. An annual review of the labor and industrial conditions of the Dominion, similar to the reports of the departments of agriculture and trade and commerce will also form part of the work of this new department. Canada has been behind other countries in most of the things aimed at by this measure, and the fact that its passage met with no exposition in parliament, shows that there is a general desire to give the experiment a fair trial.

The success of the new undertaking

the Labor Gazette. The material furnished for that periodical will have to be carefully analyzed and digested, and presented with judicial fairness. In the absence of any expressions of opinion editorially, there seems to be no reason why this should not be done. W. L. Mackenzie King, B. A., LL. B., is the gentleman who has been selected as editor-in-chief and manager of the publication. Although a young man, Mr. King, according to all accounts, is especially qualified for the position. He is a well-trained political economist, who has distinguished himself by his scholarship and attainments in in the universities of Canada and the United States, and who has been close student, theoretically, of social and industrial problems, at home and abroad. He has had journalistic experience also on the principal Toronto and Montreal journals, and, on some of the economic journals of the United States, in the discussion of questions affecting the working classes. His reports to the government on the sweating and other evils, in public contracts, are said to have supplied the data upon which the government based its policy in the awarding of contracts, and the payment of wages, for government work. Mr. King is spoken of as a warm friend of the toilers of both sexes, who has used his abilities, as opportunity offered, to help to better their condition. He has no politics in the party sense, but regards the "game" from a broad economic standpoint, and will be acceptable to all parties. He is a son of John King, Q. C., and a grandson of William Lyon Mackenzie, the tribune of the people in the stormy times of '37. If there is annything in heredity he ought to have an honest mind and will of his own, a shining virtue in one who has to discharge responsible public duties.

TO FATHOM AERIAL MYSTERIES.

Inspired by the success of von Zur lippen's flying machine, the Rev. J. R. Bacon, an insatiable English aeronautical experimentalist, proposes to make new tests during the coming sum mer. It was he who watched for an expected shower of aeronoids in a balloon with such serious results, who witnessed the recent eclipse in the same manner, and who permitted himself to be marooned on the tiny island occupied by Maplin light like Robinprovisions, and sound-catching instruments with which he studied problems of sound. He also has spent many midnight hours in the whispering galleries of St. Paul's Cathedral, and has soared in a balloon thousands of feet over the city loaded with speaking trumpets and queer-shaped ear instruments to test the acoustic properties of masses of cloud.

He now proposes to determine the possibility of conveying messages to solated places like Pekin, Mafeking, and Ladysmith by ingenious methods, First, he will send up pilot balloons, and, having ascertained the drift of air currents, he will telegraph the villages and towns over which he will later pass in his passenger balloon, asking them to listen for his cannonade, fired from below the car, and, upon hearing it, to fetch telegraph operators familiar with the Morse ode to watch for the messages he will transmit from above.

These are to be sent by means of a nuge black collapsing drum, which will so operate at this distance-seven miles-that dots and dashes will be made by its expansion and contraction, and he believes operators can read them easily even further.

Throughout the voyage and at all eights slowly descending objects are to be dropped labelled with directions to finders. If these directions are observed and the finders subsequently ommunicate with Mr. Bicon, he hopes to do much toward tracing the main drifts of the upper air currents. Mr. Bacon is to be accompanied in the expedition by a distinguished naval officer, who is much interested in

That there exists an obscure sect called the Canadian Independence League is a fact known to few but the handful of earnest souls who compose

it. That organization accumulated enough cash or credit to import a few dozen buttons bearing the inscription "Independence of Canada." The goods had to be imported, because there was no one in Canada who would manufacure them. Unfortunately for the struggling league, the buttons never reached their destination, the collector of customs at Montreal having intercepted and confiscated them. The Government seizes buttons conveying separatist sentiments; yet it permits Tarte, Bourassa and Monet to talk. This is straining the gnat and swallowing the camel.

THE REIGN OF LAW.

A tale of the Kentucky Hemp Fields To the Northerner-the Canadian 'hemp" has meant little, nothing better perhaps than a suggestion of coarse snails, or rude sacking With the Kentuckian it s different. Memories sweet and bitter verpower him at the sound of the word :heep, that tall, waving weed which an ancestor had looked out upon with lordly pride of ownership, or bent his back in the oreaking.

James Lane Allan, in his "Reign of Law," nakes even an alien love the hemp; not perhaps as he loved it, for it is not given to nany to touch nature with such an understanding hand; but we grasp somewhat of the meaning when we read of that 'fragrance once known to childhood, ever in he memory afterward, and able to bring back to the wanderer homesick thoughts of nidsummer days in the shadowy, many coned woods, over into which is blown the mell of the hemp fields."

Mr. Allan has written his allegory of those fields with a witchery that could be equalled in the dreams of a mystic Hindoo, as he, reclining, puffs dried hemp—gunyah as he, reclining, pulls dried hemp—gunyah

Behind her were gengrations of fathers and mothers who erations of fathers and mothers who erations of fathers and mothers who had laughed heartily all their days. The simple gift of wholesome laughter, often the best as often the only remedy for so many discomforts and absurdities in life—this was perhaps to be accounted among her best psychological heirlooms."

A book has just been published entitled "Canadians in Khaki," with a striking cover in three colors, which well illustrates the name. It contains a complete list o all the officers and men in South Africa of the first and second contingents, and Strathcona's Horse, also the R.M.C. gradustratecona's Forse, also the R.M.C. graduates serving in the present war. After each man's name is noted his previous war sercices, and casualties up to date are also included. Mistakes, which naturally occurred in the first lists issued by the Militia Department, have been corrected, and it should prove a useful book of reference to officers of the militia, and to all those who have friends in the Canadian contingents.

A short account of the sending of the contingents written by the wife of an officer of the militia, including the official telegrams be-tween Mr. Chamberlain and the Governor-General, and references to the work done by the Canadian Patriotic Fund, the Soldiers. AS TO FEMININE CLOTHING

Sloan's Advice on How to Run the Universa. MR. EDITOR:-

If I were boss: -There would be some radical changes in feminine clothing. If women folk insisted on wearing skirts, they would have to wear skirts of a different sort, some kind that would be firmly attached to their shirt waists or todices. There was a woman's convention the other day and for eight blessed hours every woman that got up to speak first reached around to make sure that the upper and the lower parts of her gown

I was at a commencement recently, and it was the same thing threr. Every sweet girl graduate that got up to read her essay had to fus a little with her gown before she made her bow to the audience.

Think of the muscular energy women folks waste in the course of a year, to say nothing of the nervous worry. It is no wonder that there are more women than men in the insane asylums. Then, too, look at the exhaustion that must come from the proposition of holding up skirts.

Watch a youngs'er of six go across Though her skirts are a the street. foot and a half from the ground, she will grab them in one hand, as she has seen her mother and her sisters do. She keeps on doing it every day of ber life from that on. As she gets older her skirts get heavier, and when she gets to wearing trains the task gets more arduous. Think of the energy that is wasted by not having skirts cut four inches If I were boss Dame Fashion would have to invent a new garb for women cr go out of business. There is no reason why women should not be just as sensibly and as comfortably dressed as men.

Any style, however simple, will become popular if persisted in. Women themselves would welcome any change in their garb that made life easier for them, if they would only admit it.

And if I were boss they would have to admit it. SOLOMON SLOAN.
