Browne—How so?

Towne—Well, it would be an impossibility at the present day to build a ship large enough to accommodate all the ancestors that came over on the Mayflower.

Among the passengers in a well filld parlor car coming from Cleveland to Detroit was a lumber salesman from this end of the route. He is tall, and has a deep voice, piercing eyes, a strong face and the general appearance associated with a professional man. Near him sat a pale gentleman, who moaned, moved restlessly in his seat and was unmistakably sick.

asked the salesman. "I feel very ill." "Pshaw! You don't have to tell me that. Let me feel your pulse. I'm a doctor, Put out your tongue. Indi-gestion. I'll fix you in five minutes." He hurried to the water tank, poured out a big straw colored dose and hur-

"What's the matter?" abruptly

"Swallow this." "But it's whiskey. I never touch the stuff."

"Drink it or you won't live miles, fast as we're going."

Down it went, and shortly the two were laughing and talking as though neither had ever felt a pain.

"Did I understand that you were a doctor?" timidly from a young matron who carried a kicking, howling olive branch in her arms.

"Yes. ma'am." And he never flinched. "Baby not well, Whew! What a temper!" as his keen eyes informed him that the youngster was a miniature Hercules. "He's sound as a dol-lar, madam. Must be a pin. If it's not, spank him." She came back to report that his first diagnosis was the correct one and wanted to pay. So did the man, but the "Doctor" turned aside and acted indignantly. "When I'm away from home I only practice for the good of humanity. Need a second dose, my man?"—Detroit Free Press.

His Majesty the King.

There was a great excitement near the Majestic building. A constantly growing crowd of humanity surged around an object in the centre. The sidewalk was completely blocked, and ven the autocratic scorcher was compelled to change his mad course to avoid collision with the street enthusiasts, whose voices rose and fell on the breeze like an advancing nost hailing an uncrowned ruler.

"'Nother victim of the bicycle, I s'pose," said the man who loses many valuable moments during the day trying to cross the streets in safety.

"Or the street car," supplemented another, and they added their information seeking presence to the throng. A policeman finally came along and dispursed the mob. And the cause of it all stood posing on a curbstone pedestal like a conquering hero of old, His cold proud eve surveying the officer with contempt, and he seemed ready to receive any bouquets that might be thrown at him. The crowd jeered the policeman, and the curbstone divinity bowed to the renewed plandits of the multitude. He was a baseball player.-Detroit Free Press.

Venturing Into Matrimony. If a young couple be sure enough of their own ability to shape their lives according to their actual means in venturing into matrimony they are pleased indeed, writes Mrs. Burton Harrison under the fascinating title "Heigh Ho! for a Husband" in the Ladies' Home Journal. This is so rarely the case that a young man now holds back to let thirty find him in possession of sufficient income to pay his household bills before he dares ashis household bills before he dares as-sume the privilege of a wife. There can be no reason against a girl marry-ing young if circumstances insure to there a reasonable protection against the disheartening apparition of poverty, ahivering behind the lamps and silver bon bon dishes of her wedding pres-

MEASURING PARTY

Very Popular Form of Amusement to Be in Vogue This Winter.

What promises to be a very popular form of amusement this coming winter is what is called "a measuring party." This is really a new departure from the old fashioned "progressive euchre." to which every invited guest was supposed to contribute twenty-five cents, fifty cents or a dollar, according to the supposed wealth of the participants, which was expended for prizes to be awarded to the winners. "For "a measuring party" a dainty little leaslet is sent out, to which is attached a small silken bag, one color for the gentlemen and another for the ladies. The leaflet can be hand painted by the hostess, or one of those pretty embrossed affairs to be purchased at the stationer's. On the outside of the leaflet is written in golden letters "A Measuring Party," and on the inside the following doggerel:

A measuring party is given to you; It is something novel as well as new; The invitation is in the sack, For use in bringing or sending back. A nickel for every foot you're tall; Measure yourself on door or wall, An extra cent for each inch give,

And thereby show how high you live. With music and game, refreshment and pleasure. We will meet one and all at our party of measure.

The recipient of one of these leaflets and silken bags, if the invitation is accepted, is to be put in the bag as many nickels as he or she is feet high and a penny for every extra inch.

The tallest gentleman and lady recieve the first prize, and the shortest couple the second. This new amusement is a boon to many a preplexed hostess when at her wits' ends to devisit a new game or entertainment, especially when it is a question of keeping a large house party amused.

Andrew Johnson Andrew Johnson, seventeenth President of the United States, was born at Raleigh, N. C., December 29, 1808, and died at the residence of his daughter, near Carter's Station, Tenn., July 31, 1875. When he was only four years old his father died of injuries he had received in rescuing some one from drowning. When Andrew was ten years old he was sent to a tailor to learn the trade, and, although he had a great thirst for knowledge, he was able to gratify it only under the greatest difficulties. His fellow workmen taught him the alphabet, and when he had acquired that much knowledge be borrowed the book had taught himself to read. In 1826, with his mother and stepfather, he set out in an old cart drawn by a blind horse for Greenville, Tenn. In the new home young Jackson was continuing in his lonely studies, being compelled to work hard all day. However, he was fortunate enough to meet a lady who helped him with his studies. She was Eliza Mazardle, who became his wife. While her husband was at work she would read, aloud to him from some instructive book, and it was through her he learned to write. He became interested in politics and was first elected alderman. He used to say that he had filled almost every office from alderman to President. He was elected Vice-President of the United States with President Lincoln in 1864 and on latter's assassination was swort in as President. His administration was a stormy one. He was unfortunately lacking in the tact needed for such troubled times, and he retired at the close of his term, having narrowly escaped impeachment.

Is the Republic in Danger? There are some who think that this republic, which has weathered so nobly the storms of war and of peace will go down on the shoals of hard times; that we as a nation cannot live through the headache induced by the financial sprees of ourselves and others. We are told that our civilization and our government are fit only for the days of cotton and corn pros-We are told that our whole industrial system, and the civilization of which it forms a part, must be torn up by the roots and cast away. We are told that the days of self-control and self-sufficiency are over, and that the people of this nation are really typified by the lawless bands rushing blindly hither and thither, clamorin In these times it is well for us for laws by which those men may be made rich whom all previous laws of God and man have ordained to be poor. remember that we come of hardy stock. The Angle-Saxon race, with its strength and virtues, was born of hard times. It is not easily kept down; the victims of oppression must be of some other stock. We, who live in Am-erica and who constitute the heart of this republic, are the sons and daugh-ters of "him that overcometh." Ours is a lineage untainted by luxury, un-coddled by cherity, uncorroded by wice, uncrushed by oppression. If it were not so we could not be here to-day.—David Starr Jordan in Popular Science Monthly.

Motal as a Building Material.

It is well within the memory of many persons when metal as a building material was practically unknown. But within a few years building has been almost revolutionized by the use of metal in various forms and for various purposes. Iron beams, columns, girders, rafters, and window sashes have come into use, and now we are to have as a regular addition to our list a great variety of stamped-out sec-tions. These have heretore been made mostly out of galvanised iron or some composition of the spelter sort, or, in fine high-priced work, bronze has been employed. Steel is, however, found to answer all demands far betfound to answer all demands far better than any other metal used for this purpose. Door and window casings will be made of metal, and, indeed, almost all parts of a house may be constructed of something besides wood. With paper-pulp doors and floors, metal frames and finish, slate or time register. or tin roofs, and portland cement of concrete walls, our houses may in time come to be actually fireproof, as they have for a long time unjustly claim-

What a splendid type of tireless activity is the sun as the psalmist describes it issuing like a" bridegroom from his chamber and rejoicing like a strong man to run a race." Every man ought to rise in the morning refreshed by slumber and renewed by rest, eager for the struggle of the day. But how rarely this is so. Most people rise still unrefreshed, and dreading the strain of the day's labors. The the strain of the day's labors. The cause of this is deficient vitality and behind this lies a deficient supply of pure, rich blood, and an inadequate nourishment of the body. There nourishment of the body. There is nothing that will give a man strength and energy as will Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It does this by increasing the quantity and quality of the blood supply. This nourished the nerves, feeds the brain, builds up enfeebled organs, and gives that sense of strength and rower which makes. of strength and power which makes the struggle of life a joy. The "good feeling" which follows the use of "Golden Medical Discovery" is not due to stimulant as it contains no alcohol, whiskey or other interior. whiskey or other intoxicant. It does not brace up the body, but builds it up into a condition of sound health.
