The investigation of Commissioner shadow of a doubt that the allegations of the agitators were false and unfounded; the supreme court decision of Wednesday confirms the commissioner's report in an important particular, and the agitators are left without a leg to stand on. The action in the supreme court was taken as school assessment quashed, and the agiplication was to obtain the opinion of the until the City Clerk has authority to adcourt upon the way in which school affairs vertise a respectable reward for any were administered at Bathurst, and person who will come forward and present whether the school trustees were acting legally or otherwise. The court held that the assessment was strictly legal, but refused to express any opinion as to whether the school law had been administered legally or otherwise, and dismissed the application. The court has therefore knocked the pin from under the last hope of the agitators. Of course they would express no opinion on the political side of sioner Fraser's report, and the facts elicited, prove beyond a doubt that the agitation has been a wicked creation of fanatics from the public view.
