AN AGNOSTIC.

What does the word 'agnostic' mean?' asks one of our readers, who has been too nauch absorbed in other affairs to follow closely the course of philosophic thought for good of this preparation upon the closely the course of philosophic thought and discussion. We presume he is not alone in his ignorance; for the word has often been used and rarely defined, and it is of later birth than the dictionaries and encyclopædias in common use. The word is made up of the Greek letter a (alpha privative) and the Greek word gnostikos. Thus the substantive "agnostic" means, literally, a know nothing. It is used, however, to define the position of those philosophers who claim that the human mind can know nothing but phenomena; that is, such manifestations of matter and of mind as may be studied of matter and of mind as may be studied by observation and experiment. They hold an entirely passive position as to the existence of God, neither denying nor affirming that He exists, but declaring relief, until I tried Dr. Thomas Eclectric College as we can never know anything of lead since then have hed no attack of amrming that He exists, but declaring that, as we can never know anything about Him through the evidence of the senses, it is useless to waste time in vain speculations, having no other basis than faith.
