Appointment of Committees nd Shadow In the Teachers's Life-Discussion of the Ontarto Teachers' Association - Excellent Address by Inspector Tom and Mr. Embury, of Goderich.

The regular meeting of this Associa-tion was held in the public school, Exe-ter, last Friday and Saturday, May 25th and 26th. All the sections of the Inspectorate were not represented, still, there was a good number of teachers present, and although the program was not strictly followed out, on account of the illness of Mr Strang and Mr Brown, was nevertheless, au interesting one in many respects.

The following committees were ap-The following committees were appointed :--On business-Messrs Gregory and Delgaty and Miss Halse. On reso-lutions-Messrs Baird, Hagan, Tom and McKay. The following committees were also given. Mr Embury was ten-dered a vote of thanks for his excelleat the scales at 5059 lbs. The scales at 505 and McKay. The first subject was taken up by Mr Todd. In dealing with the subject, "How to teach history from the author: ized text book," he showed that he had an extensive knowledge of history, even in its details, and that he knew more than the average tencher about it, but he did not give many hints as to the use he made of our present book. In fact, he condemned it utterly, and had not at-tempted to use it. He thought Collier's history a much better beek. He would have this subject made as life-like as possible, by representing historical char-acters just as they were, and showing clearly to pupils their concection with paper, many teachers expressed their In the discussion that followed this paper, many teachers expressed their guest of James Linklater this week. Mr Tom stated that it could not, and expressed the opinion that Creighton's was a history that touched on all points of importance in a very nice manner. "Sunahine and shadow in the teach-er's life," was the subject of the Presi-dent's address, which was delivered in Rev. the afternoon. Discontentment was one of the great shadows. Another especially with young and inexperienced teachers, was the difficulty of constantly come the new pastor. controlling pupils. A third shadow was the instability of the teachers' positions. Still he thought the sunshine should al-ways chase away the shadows. Teachers had a good deal of leisure time, which they should use wisely. His surround-ings were such that he was not so much in the way of temptation as many young men. The conquest of evil natures in his pupils would repay him in unalloyed pleasure. His influence in moulding the characters of his pupils, and inspiring them with aspirations after a nobler life. would be a source of satisfaction. The conclusion of this excellent address was. that the teachers sadness or happiness

The evening session was rendered more pleasing by two excellent readings, one in the Yorkshire dialect, and the other in Scotch, by Mr McCallum, for which he was warmly thanked. Saturday's session was used in the dis-cussion of "Entrance Literature" which was taken up by Mr Embury, in the ab-sence of Mr Strank. Mr Embury brought out the following points in a very practical manner. I. Carefully separate the object of literature from a language leason. 2. Literature should not be taught in such a way as to appear reighting at (10 of act of school).
