The Great Campaign.

Special to Evening Telegram.

LONDON, Jan. 12.

A big scheme of unemployment insurance will be the work of the new Liberal Government if returned to power. Winston S. Churchill outlined the scheme in the course of a speech at Glasgow to-night when he addressed two huge meetings. Mr. Churchill announced that the details of the scheme had already been worked out by the Board of Trade, and he said that if the people granted the money, the House of Commons would pass a compulsory and contributory employment insurance bill which would deal with the affairs of upwards of two million two hundred and fifty thousand and adult workers, skilled and unskilled alike. The shipbuilding, engineering and allied trades would first come under consideration, while side by side with the scheme facilities would be given for voluntary insurances aided by the state. The new plan would be carried on in conjunction with one hundred and fifty labor exchanges, which are to be opened throughout the Kingdom. These exchanges, Mr. Churchill said, would give labor a scientific market and the advantages which modern civilization had conferred on all the classes. The insurance plan would improve and standardize labor and would equally benefit the employer and artisan. With an eye to the possibility of the Nationalists holding the balance of power in the new Parliament, A. J. Balfour, speaking at York, glided gently over the Home Rule problem. He said it was a subject requiring the attention of all students of politics—one of the greatest problems put before the country. Yet it was brought forward by the Liberals as an unconsidered item and as an unconsidered scheme of legislation. He had said just enough to make the Nationalists struggle for the return of the Radical party and has not devoted either the time or the attention which the subject required. Referring to Tariff Reform, Mr. Balfour repeated that the Tory party were pledged not to increase the cost of food to the poor. He thought that a small duty on wheat with reference to the colonies would diminish rather than increase the cost of bread. The Prime Minister at Salisbury to-night dealt with the humor of a situation in which Mr. Balfour criticized omissions in the Premier's election address, whereas Mr. Balfour's own election manifesto gave only a brief paragraph to the subject of Tariff Reform. Mr. Asquith added that although the country was within two days of the election, it was left in darkness concerning Mr. Balfour's views on Tariff Reform. The feature of the campaign is the great attention devoted in the newspapers of the rival parties to the comparative cost of living in Great Britain, Germany and the United States. Columns of figures and statistics are given daily for the purpose of supporting or denouncing, as the case may be, the policy of Tariff Reform. Election meetings still are the scenes of considerable disorder. One at Brentwood to-night developed into a riot in which many persons were injured.

Will Contest Election.

Special to Evening Telegram.
BOSTON, Mass., Jan. 12.
Although former Mayor John F. Fitzgerald is apparently elected chief executive of the city for four years under the new city charter by a plurality of 1,415, James J. Storrow, the runner up in the contest, proposes to put up a stiff fight for the office. Mr. Storrow's campaign managers will ask for a recount. They claim that their figures show Fitzgerald's lead to be 180 instead of 1,415. The new City Council will be composed of seven citizens, Municipal League candidates and two Fitzgerald men. When he takes office Boston's new Mayor will have placed in his hand by the new charter power far beyond what any of his predecessors ever had. His authority can be compared only with the authority exercised by the boards that govern cities where the commission type of government prevails.

The Garden of Eden.

Special to Evening Telegram.
NEW YORK, Jan. 12.
A cable despatch from Constantinople says: According to the Journal de Stamboul, Sir William Wilcocks, the British adviser to the Minister of Public Works, thinks he has determined the exact site of the Garden of Eden. He places it at Harirap, a flourishing oasis, some 250 kilometers northwest of Bagdad. Through this site the Euphrates runs and is divided into four arms, representing the four rivers of Eden. Sir William suggests that the Deluge was merely the flooding of the entire plain between the Euphrates and Tigris, owing to these rivers breaking down the irrigation dikes which had been built by the pastoral dwellers on the plain.

Trouble at Carbonara Six Men Arrested.

While the 150 men engaged to go to Sydney to work at the coal mines were waiting at the railway station at Carbonara last evening a row arose between two of the men; who were under the influence of liquor, and in about a minute there was a general melee which the Carbonara police force was not able to quell. Judge Panney wired to Harbor Grace for assistance. Meantime the row became more furious, and more than half the men present were taking a hand in. Head Constable Newhook and his men had a hard time and were roughly handled. They finally succeeded in arresting six of those who they believed to be the cause of the riot. They were taken before Judge Panney later and four of them were sentenced to six weeks' imprisonment with hard labor in the Harbor Grace jail. The crowd, in angry mood, hung around the station till a late hour.

Annual Sociable.

The annual sociable of George St. Young Men's Association held at the Presbyterian Hall last night was very successful, except in point of attendance. The audience was very small. Mr. C. P. Ayre, Hon. V. P. of the Association occupied the chair. The programme included an excellent concert in which Messrs. H. Tuff and J. O'Reilly sang solos, also Misses Storey, Strong and Ayre. After the concert refreshments were served. All present were well pleased with the entertainment. The money taken will be used for the Library Fund.

The ship had terrific weather all through with hurricanes from the westward, and a sea which time and again swept her decks but did no damage strange to say. On the 9th inst. the vessel was holed to and frost and sleet was the experience. Daily runs were—190, 249, 248, 137, 179, 202, 173, 20, 45, 197 and 155. ### OBITUARY.

LEWIS MILLER, ESQ.

We record with regret to-day the death of Mr. Lewis Miller, of the firm of Callahan, Glass & Co., who passed away this morning at his late residence, Power Street, after a tedious and painful illness. His health had been failing for the past year or two, and since last November he declined more rapidly and had been obliged to stay at home from his place of business most of the time during the past two months. Deceased was born at Tilloultown, in Scotland, 58 years ago. He came to Newfoundland when only 19 years of age and worked for several years as an employee in the dry good business of Messrs. J. W. Stewart. About 28 years ago the firm of Callahan, Glass & Co., furniture dealers was organized, and the big factory on Duckworth Street was erected. Mr. Miller was the guiding spirit in this undertaking and remained a partner in the firm up to the time of his death. Helping by his ability and industry to build up the splendid business now existing. Mr. Miller was a very fair feeling and astute business man, and was square and honest in all his dealings. He had a large circle in the city and country, who will regret to learn of his demise. He leaves a widow and one son and two daughters. Mrs. Miller is sister of Hon. D. Morrison. The Telegram extends its sympathy.

Rare Royal Signatures

No sovereign in Europe is more chary about signing his name so writes it so rarely as the King of Spain, Alfonso XIII. Some time ago when an address was sent to him from an English Society, which had just completed, at considerable expense the restoration of Waltham Cross erected by King Edward I. in memory of his Spanish consort, Queen Eleanor of Castile, the committee expressed the hope that His Most Catholic Majesty would accept the office of patron and would send his signature, to be enrolled among the records of the society.

The King, however, in acknowledging the address, and consenting to the use of his name as patron, caused his private secretary to state: "His Majesty regrets not to be able to make an exception to his strict rule of never bestowing his signature on any but relatives and close personal friends." For, unlike the other rulers of Europe who are compelled to sign every day to hundreds of documents every day of the year, Alfonso subscribes every paper requiring the sign manual of the sovereign, not with his name, but with the proud words, "I, the King, Yo el Rey."—The Metropolitan Magazine.

Bronchitis More Than a Cold

Often develops rapidly into pneumonia—cure is found in Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine.
Any cold is serious enough when its dreadful possibilities are considered, but when there is soreness or tightness in the chest and a dry hard cough you can look for bronchitis, which is often confused with an ordinary cold. It is usually known by aching limbs and body pains, chilly feelings, weakness and loss of appetite. Fever, dry skin, thirst, coated tongue and constipation are other symptoms. Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine seems almost like a specific for bronchitis because it is so successful in loosening up the cough, aiding expectoration and preventing the inflammation from reaching the lungs. Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is so prompt in affording relief and so thorough and far-reaching in action that it succeeds where ordinary cough medicines have no influence. 25 cts. a bottle, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

How An Actress Snubbed the Kaiser.

Mme. Jeanne Granier is full of her interview with the Emperor of Germany. They talked of all kinds of things, among others of the many times that His Majesty had seen the actress on the stage. "I have followed your career with so much interest," said the Emperor, "that I believe I could tell your age within a year or two." Mme. Granier chuckled and wrinkled her eyes up in a way she has when there is an epigram coming. "With all respect, I should not advise your Majesty to try the experiment," she said. "Why not?" said the Kaiser. "I am rather a good hand at guessing ladies' ages." "Does your Majesty think so?" said Mme. Granier. "The other day when you were guessing the age of a pretty woman you were more than three centuries out in your reckoning." She referred, of course, to the famous Leonardo-Lucas bust controversy, in which the Kaiser took Dr. Bode's side so emphatically.

How He Won The V. C.

There are only three Victoria Cross men, commissioned or on the lower deck, on active service in the British Navy at present. One of them is Admiral Sir Arthur Knyvet Wilson, whose appointment as First Sea Lord on a succession to Lord Fisher of Kilverstone has been officially confirmed. How the gallant Admiral won the coveted decoration makes a thrilling reading. At the battle of El Teb in the Soudan, in 1884, the corner of the square where Wilson was in command of the Naval Brigade's Gardner gun was broken. A sword in hand, Wilson fought single-handed and steamed the ugly rush. Then his blade broke, whereupon he fought with his fists, the sword hilt making a most formidable knuckle-duster which sent many a dervish to the ground. Wilson's splendid stand enabled a detachment of the York and Lancaster to rush into the breach with the bayonet and so save the situation.

Race War.

Deadly Fight Between British and Italian Miners.
Grand Forks, B.C., Jan. 5.—Reports heretofore carefully guarded and hushed up, have reached here and been confirmed that a fight between two sections of miners at Phoenix on New Year's Eve was a most serious affair. At least seventy men were on each side in the fight, which took place near one of the hotels. And it was Welsh and English against Italians. Three men are reported dead and fifteen in the hospital as a result. The row began in a small way, but some bad blood that had been rising for some time between the miners of different nationalities caused a general battle.

A Prelate's Lottery.

Archbishop of Canterbury Once Ran a Big Drawing.

A lottery ran by an Archbishop of Canterbury is unthinkable at the present day, and yet in the reign of George II. the greatest lottery ever known in Britain was run by the Primate, the Lord Chancellor, and the Speaker of the House of Commons. The splendid library which that noted doctor and art collector, Sir Hans Sloane, had gathered during his lifetime—Sloane street and Sloane square still keep his memory green—was offered by his executors to the nation for the nominal sum of £20,000. But the Treasury, as usual, pleaded poverty, and pretended it could not find that large sum. So the Archbishop of Canterbury, in conjunction with the two gentlemen named above, organized a state lottery, with the sanction of Parliament, in order to raise the required money.

A hundred thousand tickets at £3 each were issued, and no less than £200,000 was to be distributed in prizes to the lucky winners of the numbers drawn, the first being £10,000 and the lowest a £10 note. So successful was the venture that all the tickets were eagerly purchased by the public, and there was more than £100,000 left in the hands of the Archbishop, the Lord Chancellor, and the Speaker to dispose of. They made most excellent use of this money for the benefit of the nation, as the record of their expenditure easily proves. They built the first portion of the British Museum with it; they bought the Sloane collection mentioned above; they purchased those priceless treasures, the Harleian and Cottonian manuscripts, and they put up a goodly sum as an endowment fund for the new museum. A lottery helped to beat the Spanish Armada in the reign of Queen Elizabeth. It was the first state lottery to take place in this country, and it was arranged at the express desire of the astute Queen herself for a most noble purpose. Her order ran as follows: "Her Majesty wisheth it to the intent that such profits as may arise, after the charges borne, may be converted towards the repairs of havens and ships and strength of the Realm, and such other public good works."

The lottery was a great success, and with its profits the very vessels with which Drake and Lord Howard beat the "Invincible Armada" were made seaworthy and fit; of that there can hardly be a doubt. In the year of Trafalgar a public lottery yielded over £200,000 to the state; and from 1705 to 1824 there was scarcely a single year in which the Government did not raise a large sum by lotteries sanctioned by Parliament.

Rude Returns For Hospitality.

An Irishman, Nursed In Italian Count's Home, Elopes With the Countess.

Rome, January 5.—Countess Pasolini, an American, has eloped from her husband's house here with a young Irishman named Coles. It is reported. The Countess was Miss Mildred Montague, of Chattanooga, Tenn.; where she was married to the heir of an ancient Bolognese family in 1907. The story goes that Coles, a handsome fellow, educated at Eton, came to Rome for the hunting season, and being crippled by a fall in the hunting field was carried to Count Pasolini's house. There he was carefully nursed and hospitably entertained until restored to health. Rumor says that the Countess, a beautiful woman, fond of admiration, was courted by Coles, and returned his passion.

Monorail

BRITISH CAPITAL UNION POSSE

A visitor in Montreal recently wrote Mr. William Anstruther, an English capitalist who is on his way to British Columbia on business. Mr. Anstruther greatly interested (C.P.) officials by his enthusiastic description of the new monorail cars introduced into practical use in England by Mr. Louis Brennan, the inventor of the gyroscope. Mr. Anstruther was present at the trial trip of these cars at Gillingham in Kent a couple of weeks ago, and he declares that the success which attended that trial makes it a matter beyond all doubt that the monorail system of railways will in the not very distant future revolutionize transportation. "This great invention," said Mr. Anstruther, "has far greater significance for Canada than any one here has any idea of, for not only will it effect an immense saving in the cost of transportation, but it will bring the most inaccessible portions of the Dominion within easy reach of the traveler. For instance, I understand that many parts of Labrador are immensely rich in minerals, but that the development of these rich mineral areas is absolutely prohibited by lack of transportation. To build ordinary railways into these regions would be a ridiculous waste of capital that no one would think of undertaking. With the monorail system, however, the cost would be insignificant. There would be no need to grade a track at all, for the monorail car will run uphill and down dale with perfect ease. Ties, too, would be unnecessary for there are not two rails to be kept rigid and absolutely parallel. A single
