Italy's Kitchener.

Stories of General Luigi Cadorno.

The son of a famous soldier, General Raphael Cadorno, who fought for his country in her great struggles of 1848-9 and earned the reputation of being one of Italy's military leaders, General Luigi Cadorno, Commander of the First Italian Army, has proved himself a military genius in every sense of the term. For he is not only a great soldier, but is a recognized authority on the wars of the past four decades, and a fine strategist and tactician, his war treatises and manuals being the guide books of every Italian officer.

The Austrians are well aware that they have fighting against them a man who knows every inch of the north and north-east frontiers of Italy, and one whose lightning strategy is proverbial in military circles throughout Europe. General Cadorno's thoroughness is illustrated by the fact that for six years he tramped the passes of the Carinthian and Tyrolean Alps, notebook in hand, marking a vantage point here and a death-trap there. And it was the knowledge thus gained which enabled him at ultimate manoeuvres to out-general everybody and led to rapid promotion.

It is related that in the manoeuvres of 1911 he set himself to play the part of a defeated general. Orders miscarried, reinforcements came late, general confusion set in, and Cadorno's troops were surrounded. Then he set himself to extricate them, and carried out a retreat which was the marvel of the Italian tacticians. One great advantage General Cadorno possesses is his prodigious memory. He never wants a map, and there is scarcely a path or village, however small, on the Italian frontier with which he is unacquainted.

Since he was a boy of ten—he is now sixty-five years of age—General Cadorno has been learning soldiering, and he is rather fond of saying that he has scarcely passed the elementary stages. A silent martinet, he never forgives incompetence in his officers. At the same time he is the friend of every man, for he loves them all, and is ever considerate of their welfare.

In 1881 General Cadorno married, and he has a son and three daughters, two of whom are nuns.

The Youngest M.P. is Irish Soldier.

The youngest member of Parliament, Mr. John Esmonde, took his seat in the House of Commons at Westminster a fortnight ago. He wore khaki.

Mr. Esmonde was elected as Nationalist M.P. for North Tipperary, in succession to his father, who died. He is twenty-one years old, and takes the place, as the youngest M.P. of Mr. W. C. G. Gladstone, who was killed in battle a little while ago.

Mr. Esmonde is a Lieutenant in the Tyneside Irish (27th Northumberland Fusiliers). He is by profession an engineer, and was trained in the shipbuilding yard of Messrs. Harland and Wolff, Ltd.

The oldest M.P. is also an Irish Nationalist—Mr. Samuel Young, a Belfast distiller, who is eighty-three years old, and sits for East Cavan.

TWELVE MEN KILLED IN PIT CAGE ACCIDENT.

A pit cage accident, in which 12 men were killed and seven injured, took place at Bentinck Colliery, Kirby, near Mansfield, Nottinghamshire, on June 30th.

Two hundred yards from the surface a descending cage, in which were fourteen men, collided violently with an ascending cage containing five men. Part of the floor of the descending cage fell out, and ten men fell 600 feet to the bottom of the shaft and were dashed to pieces. Two other men who were in the cage were killed. One of them was hanging by his clothes to a piece of broken iron, and he called to the survivors: "Take me off; I can't hold." They lifted him down, but he died immediately.

One of the men was saved through his clothes catching on a piece of iron. He swung for some time and then caught hold of an iron rail at the bottom of the cage and pulled himself up. The other survivors escaped by clinging to the sides of the cage.

THE OLDEST VESSEL AFLOAT.

Some discussion has recently taken place as to which is the oldest vessel afloat. The Ceres, built in 1811, is said to be the oldest British steamer. She is still sailing in and about the Bristol Channel. But the Jenny, which was built 128 years ago, with timbers of the old wooden wall type, i.e. British oak, is regarded as the oldest steamer trading under the Board of Trade regulations. Her certificate of registry shows that she was built at Nevins, Carnarvonshire, in 1787. This ancient craft has withstood many a storm. More than once she has been driven ashore, but she is so stoutly built that she never sustained serious damage.
