David J. Park, senior member of the firm of Bark Bros., died at his residence, Chatham, Wednesday morning, from the effects of a severe burning he received by the explosion of a coal oil lamp last week. He leaves a wife and three young children. During the greater part of the first four days he was unconscious, but on Monday and Tuesday he was much easier, and the report of his demise was a great surprise to his wide circle of acquaintances. Mr. Park was one of Chatham's prosperous men, being largely instrumental in building up a business that is widely known in Western Canada, and his death will prova severe loss to his brothers, the other partners in the firm.
