ENLARGED AND IMPROVED

The House for Incurables Unde goes Alterations That Enhance Its Usefulness.

One of London's most deserving charitable institutions, the Home for Incurables, which was established some years ago by the ladies in connection ing the closing year of the century, been was sent to my husband by Lenana, considerably enlarged and improved. The home, which is situated on Dundas street, is now large and attractive, and capable of accommodating twice the number that could have been taken in formerly. Everything has been done in order to surround the helpless ones with the brightest and sunniest environment. Twelve new rooms have been added, including a men's ward. Many of the rooms are particularly attractive, and will be for the accommodation of those incurables who have no home, but are possessed of a little money. At present there are 29 patients in the home; but when all the rooms have been prepared for the reception of occupiers,40 will be accommodated. About one-half of those in the home are paypatients. The new wing, together with some improvements to the old one, cost upwards of $5,000. Mrs. Merchant, president of the W. C. A., and Mrs. Perrin, treasurer, with other leading ladies of the city, have worked hard to bring to a successful issue this good work. Dr. G. B. Campbell kindly gives his services, and takes a deep interest in all matters pertaining to the work. Mrs. Groshaw, the superintendent, is specially fitted for the very trying position she has to fill. Her cheerful disposition and tact contribute in no small degree to the success in managing the home, where three-fourths of the patients are entirely helpless.

PERMANENTLY DISABLED.

Three Doctors' Verdict on Robert Bond Five Years Ago, Yet He Lives Today.

Mount Brydges, Ont., Jan. 14.-Five years ago the Provincial Provident Institution, of St. Thomas, paid a total disability claim to Mr. Robert Bond, of this place. Mr. Bond had Bright's Disease. The doctors had given him up and three physicians examined him for the institution and pronounced him "totally and permanently disabled and incurable."

He commenced to use Dodd's Kidney Pills and soon regained his health and strength. He is quite well today and the old gentleman enjoys nothing better than telling about it. "I owe my life to Dodd's Kidsays: ney Pills. I never would have had the pleasure of seeing the old century out and the new one in but for this wonderful remedy. It's five years ago now since they all said I couldn't live a month. Yet here I am."

Lion-Hunting by a Lady.

In Pearson's Weekly Mrs. Hinde tells how, during a year spent in Africa, she greatly longed to see a wild lion, and how at last, shortly before her departure from that country, she saw in a few weeks 30 or 40 of these sav-age animals, and was successful in killing one herself. She was with her husband on the Athi River. The plains were covered with short grass. At half-past five in the afternoon they climbed into a tree, sent their men and horses back to the camp, had an ex-cellent dinner and then began their respective watches, Mrs. Hind says:

"As the night draws on the grasses rustle beneath the stealthy footsteps of jackals, and suddenly one hears the weird cry of a hyena, which is tekan up on all sides. Later come the antelope and zeoras, and the rushing sound of a herd galloping past, and last of all the grunt, which swells gradually to the heart-quaking roar of the lion.

"A startled stillness follows, and then nearer and nearer comes the grunting, till the Mon himself appears, walking very slowly, and stopping every few yards to roar and roar." On this particular night the watchers heard the lions cracking the bones of their prey in the patch of grass in front. When the meal was over they began to play, and the noises they made suggested mammoth tom-cats. Each repeated the call in turn, and the grass rustled and swayed as they leasped about.

"It was in the hush of early morning," says Mrs. Hinde, "just before the rising of the sun, and during my watch, that I thought I heard a sound in the neighborhood of the bait. Raising myself on one elbow, I saw a magnificent lion standing over the dead zebra, barely twelve feet away. He picked up half the zebra in his mouth and carried it just as a cat does her kittens, his feet apart and with a rolling walk. "As I woke by husband, the lion—which was then about forty yards off—charged straight toward him, and with my 303 I hit him in the chest, as we afterward discovered, tearing his windpipe to pieces and breaking his spine. He charged a second time, and the next shot hit him through the shoulder and entered his heart. dropped, one could not help feeling a pang of regret, he looked so splendid. He gave about six sobbing sighs, and ceased to move.

"We had nearly an hour to wait before our men and horses were to arrive; so we breakfasted and as we finished our meal we saw four lions down by the river—a huge male, a lionless, and two big cubs. My husbland took a shot-over me-and the lion fell with a roar. He struggled up again, and it was not until the third shot that he finally fell in the river grass.

"At the third shot our men appeared and they went down to the river and cut a path through the payrus along which to drag the lion. grand, black-maned beast, well known to the natives as a man-eater and a with the W. C. A. of the city, has, dur- cattle-thief. A deputation of thanks

EARLY CLOSING CONVICTION QUASHED.

Toronto, Jan. 14. - The divisional court on Saturday quashed the convic-tion of A. McMillan, a prominent jeweler of Ottawa, for selling goods after the hour prescribed by the early clos-ing bylaw. Mr. McMillan appealed on two grounds, first that the goods were sold by an auctioneer, and not in the regular way of trade, and second, that the magistrate exceeded his jurisdiction in ordering imprisonment in default of payment of costs The court upset the conviction on the

A SOLDIER'S TREASURE

With a rose in the rim of his fawn colored hat, And a jingle of saber and spur,

A soldier rode by in the dawn and the dew Ere the village was scarcely astir. The patter and clatter of sharp little hoofs Brought her into the window above Her eyes were as blue as the sky overhead. Unclouded by sorrow or love.

In the gold of the sunrise they halted below, Bay mare and brave rider, a space And her kerchief dropped out as she leaned from the sill, A fragment of linen and lace. He caught it in air on the point of his sword

And buttoned it under his blouse, And cantered away, but drew rein on And turned to look back at the house.

While she dreamed of a soldier returning from war To halt at her window again,

The mare and her rider lay dead in the dust Where bullets were falling like rain; And a comrade who passed in a moment of truce Stooped over and covered his face With a kerchief he found in the breast of his blouse A fragment of linen and lace.

An Arctic Night.

Nothing more wonderfully beautiful can exist than the Arctic night. It is dreamland, painted in the imagination's most delicate tints; it is color etherealized. One shade melts into another, so that you cannot tell where one ends and the other begins.

No forms—it is all faint, dreamy, color music, a far-away melody, on mute strings. Give it brighter colors and it is no longer so beautiful. Over the ice fields there are violet blue shadows with lighter pink tints, where a ridge here and there catches the last reflection of the vanished day.

Up in the blue of the cupola, the stars, speaking peace, as they always do.

In the south stands a large yellow moon encircled by a yellow ring, and light golden clouds floating on the blue background.

background Presently the aurora borealis shakes over the vault of heaven its veil of glitover the vault of heaven its veil of glit-tering silver; it spreads, it contracts again, in restless change; next it breaks into many folded bands of shining silver, over which shoot billows of glittering rays, and then the glory vanishes. Pres-ently it shimmers in tongues of flame over the very zenith, and then it shoots a bright ray right up from the horizon, until the whole melts away in the moon-light, and it is as though one heard the light, and it is as though one heard the sigh of a departing spirit.

Here and there are left a few waying streamers of light, vague as a foreboding—they are the dust from Aurora's glittering cloak.

But now it is growing again, new lightnings shoot up, and the endless game begins afresh. And all this time this utter stillness, impressive as the symphony of infinitude.

To what end all this beauty with not a creature to reside in it? This is
