opinion the car which caused the death of Charles Blow at the corner of Wellington and Horton streets, on the evening of Aug. 31, was running at an unusual and dangerous rate of speed, and that had the motorman had proper control of his car, the accident would have been avoided. The jury also found that the gong was rung.

An important recommendation was also made by the jury that the proper authorities be instructed to notify the police to report all cases where street cars are observed running at an immoderate rate, and that the police magist: ate deal with the offenders.
