Some time ago Patrick Berry, with his arm in a sling, was arrested on a charge of vagrancy, and remanded for a week. He was brought up this morning, and by his cross-examination ot the witnesses called for the prosecuion, showed himself to be of more than verage intelligence. He had been begging on the street, using the suposed-damaged arm as a pretext to ask ined at the jail the surgeon, Dr. Mac-Arthur, could find no trouble, and he aid so in the court this morning. The defendant claimed to come from Toledo, and said that he had been making his way for Toronto to get work. At Sandwich he hurt his arm and he had been compelled to beg to et something to eat.

The magistrate believed the man was clever pan-handler, and said that he ought to be ashamed of himself for begging when he was big and strong nough to work.

Although Berry put up a strong plea o be released, the magistrate gave him six months in Central Prison. A Woodstock man was very nervous s he stood up in the box to answer to charge of being drunk. He shivered o hard that the other prisoners shook n their shoes. A man, frightened as he was, had sufficient punishment in the magistrate's opinion, and he was al-

Another drunk was discharged, and me was remanded for a week.
