'MARIE, LTD.," AT THE MAJESTIC THEATRE A DISTINCT SUCCESS

Many Extra Attractions Help To Make a Well-Balanced

"Marie, Ltd.," Alice Brady's latest Select picture, which was seen at the Majestic Theatre last night, is assuredly one of the best pictures she has ever made. Miss Brady is cast in a role for which she is well fitted and gives an admirable characterization of the girl who gave up a promising career to take a position in her mother's fashionable millinery establishment on Fifth Avenue. Fifth Avenue.

All the true metropolitan atmosphere is seen in this remarkably realiste story. Traffic-crowded, people-filled Fith Avenue, the exclusive hat shop of "Marie, Ltd.," a train hold-up—all are true to life and furnish an excellent background for this clever and versatile Select star.

background for this clever and versatile Select star.

The story is clean, breezy and fascinating, with just enough heart-interest to make it appeal to all classes. The plot is absorbing; the characters, human ones, each actor portraying to which, is some ability when you consider the cast in the picture—the role he assumes. assumes.
"Marie, Ltd.," is the story of a girl who comes east to help her mother in her fashionable millinery establishment. On the train she meets Blair Carson, who fails in lover with her on sight. They promise to see much of each other, but thing described in the sight. They promise to see much of each other, but things do not materialize as they expected. Cofonel Lambert, an old roue, falls in love with Drina, and her mother is anxious that she marry him. "MAYTIME" AT GRAND AND VERY PLEASING

Musical Numbers Particularly Good and Remarkably

London theatre-goers were provided with exceptional entertainment on Thursday evening, when "Maytime," a unique piay, was presented at the Grand Theatre by a most capable company. The play is different from anything Londoners have seen here in a number of seasons. It is not a musical comedy, but the musical numbers 'rendered last evening pleased the audience more than an assemblage at the theatre has been pleased before ir a long time. "Maytime" is undoubtedly one of the worthiest entertainments of its kinnow to be seen in the theatre, and as it is presented by Miss Yra Jeanne, James R. Marshall and the other good actors of the cast, it is a thing of charming melodies, intelligible stoy, fresh humor and tasteful color. Miss Jeanne is an actress of sincerity and a singer of skill and power. She has an exceptional personality, and if she were left out of the play it would be robbed of its main asset. Her singing of "Will You Remember?" with Mr. Marshall was vey pleasing, and brought rounds of applause from chairs to gallery.

Too much cannot be sald for the acting of Mr. Marshall, who shared London theatre-goers were provided chairs to gallery.

Too much cannot be said for the acting of Mr. Marshall, who shared last evening's honors with Miss Jeanne. His singing is all that could be desired, and his acting is exceptionally great.

sired, and his acting is exceptionally good.

Miss Jeanne plays the difficult role of Ortillie Van Zandt. She is called upon to po tray the maiden of 1846, the marton of 1855, a widow of 1880, and finally a dashing debutante of the present day. The story of the play opens in the early decades of the last century and continues through three generations down to the busy times of the present day. The costumes of the olden days proved very interesting and the gorgeous gowns worn by the female members of the cast caught the eyes of the laddes.

Otis Sheridan and Miss Frances Golden are deserving of especial mention for their capable performance. They inject most of the comedy into the play, especially Mr. Sheridan, who is good for a number of laughs. Marie Pettis also takes her part in a capable manner. Phillip Heege plays the exceptionally difficult role of Claude Van Zandt most successfully.

In short, "Maytime" is one of the best plays ever presented in London, and a return engagement will surely be appreciated by those who may have an opportunity of seeing it should it again visit London.

LONDON MANUFACTURERS BEING KEPT VERY BUSY

manufacturers are very busy. There is not a factory complaining about lack of orders. Retailers are also v happy over the business outlook. Present takings are much below those of a month ago, but greatly in excess of January of last year. Hog prices are dropping, but cattle continue to sell at about steady prices.
