Far-reaching results in the improvement of London's street railway service are expected as a result of a conference this morning between President Charles Currie of the street railway, and R. G. Ivey, vicepresident, with Mayor Wenige and other city officials. As a result of the meeting, it was announced that the street car tracks crushed to the ground by a cement held for his recovery. on Askin street would be completely on Askin street would be completely relaid immediately, and also the tracks on York street from Richmond to Ridout streets. line will also be relaid and extended toward the city limits.

A bylaw to authorize an immediate start on the construction of a new highway bridge at Ridout street will be submitted to the ratepayers at the next municipal election in December, if the council approves. The proposal, which was discussed at this morning's conference, is for the city to build a modern structure carrying a single line railway track in the center for which the street railway comter for which the street railway compay will pay an annual rental based on traffic and also on the cost of the

In Agreement.

There is practical agreement that the solution of the problem lies in the construction of an adequate and modern highway bridge carrying a single line of railway track in the center. This has been the idea of single line of ranway track in center. This has been the idea of the city engineer for some time past, and the mayor believes that he has the right conception of the proper solution of the problem. President currie also stated that such a structure would be quite agreeable to the company, as that is the way similar problems have been solved by other problems have been solved by other
