THE QUEEN'S JUBILEE. 1887.

Long live the Queen of England; The new-born year shall be To all the loyal hearted A year of jubilee.

For fifty years a monarch; Millions her rule obey. How vast the mighty empire Now subject to her sway.

Victoria, Queen and Empress. High though her titles be, The grace of Christ has given her

A truer majesty. Her crown's most radiant jewel

Is still her people's love: In joy, in grief, she leads them

To seek the crown above.

THE EVERY-DAY LIFE.

It is our every-day life that de-cides what kind of Christians we We cannot form a proper are. estimate of Christian character by seeing our friends now and then, or passing a day or two in their society at intervals.

We are generally thrown into the society of our friends upon pleasant occasions. We meet them upon life's holidays oftener than in the usual routine of daily duties. We greet them upon social occawhen they are prepared to sions meet us with pleasant words and loving smiles. It is then to smile and speak kindly. It is easy to wear a cheerful look when the burden and task are put away from them, and when free from the influences that chafe and fret the body and soul.

Divine grace is not always required upon occasions like this to win the good opinion and approval of others. There is often enough natural goodness about human beings to bring to the surface of their lives those genuine graces which charm other eyes and win the respect and confidence of those with whom they come in contact.

Not so, however, in the every-day life. Divine grace alone can sustain the soul when the burden is heavy, and care and trial meet us at every step. There is not enough imoral strength in the heart of lhumanity to sustain it when the body is weary, and the poor, weak tarms just ready to let fall the Burden. When trial, discourage-ment, and disaster all combine to render the life-path dreary, then the blessed faith in Christ alone can hold those unpleasant influences in check and still the troubled waters. With the "abiding Comforter" in the soul, jît is as easy to smile and ap-pear cheerful in adverse circum-stances as for the worlding to be happy in the hours of peace and prosperity.

It is our every day life that builds up our Christian character. If we overcome the daily annoy ances of life we grow strong and heroic, and it soon becomes a pleasant task to do, bear, and suffer. The service of Christ is one that grows lighter and more pleasant as the years go by. It never galls or inflicts needless wounds upon those who are engaged in it. who are engaged in it,

. er

It is our daily life that exerts a lasting influence over the world It is this that tests the value of: religion, and proves to others that it is pure gold, and not a mere pro-fession. It weighs and measures the golden treasure in a way which proves its great worth, and the sceptic himself stands confounded and silenced.—Selected.
