

GENERAL INTEREST IS GIVEN AS CAUSE OF WINNIPEG STRIKE

Witnesses Declare Disturbed Conditions Were Factor Fifteen Months Ago.

Winnipeg, July 31.—Two statements setting forth causes leading up to the general labor unrest which manifested itself in the recent sympathetic strike were made at today's session of the Robson royal commission by James Winfield, president of the Trades and Labor Council, and A. E. Ernest Robinson, secretary of the council. A more complete statement of those conditions will be made at the next session, and it is probable that both witnesses will be cross-examined. At the request of defence counsel, the evidence took the form of simple statements, and witnesses were not questioned.

Both statements covered the ground of the general unrest present in the mass of workers in Canada which had commenced as a noticeable factor some fifteen months ago, and had grown steadily until in the Winnipeg strike it had reached its general climax.

Confining his evidence largely to disputes between building trades workers and their employers, one of the causes of the sympathetic strike, James Winfield, told of meetings between building exchange officials and workers, when, in response to arguments for increased wages, employers contended that if an increase were granted building operations would cease and the men would be in a worse position than before.

After several further attempts to reach a settlement, Mr. Winfield testified, it was decided to bring employees in the building trades into a council. The building craftsmen earned only $600 a year, while the lowest possible amount on which they carried was $500. Five children could live on $1500, he said, but employers maintained that the wages were insufficient, the industry was not self-supporting, and they made an offer of a five-cent increase, the men demanding 30c, 20c and 15c, which they later decided to scale down to a blanket increase of 20c. The best the builders would do was 10c, which was refused, and a strike called May 1, following a vote overwhelming in its endorsement.

Made Last Effort. Metal workers had also decided to strike, but made a last effort at a fair adjustment, he stated. This failing, they struck on May 2. A conference then took place between the iron masters, Mayor Charles F. Gray, Premier R. C. Norris and representatives of the workers, but failure of the employers to grant collective bargaining proved a stumbling block, he declared. Knowing the fight they had had before and realizing the sternness of the one ahead of them, the builders and ironworkers appealed to the Trades and Labor Council to ask all workers to support them, he said, and the council complied, asking all affiliated unions to vote, which resulted in favor of a sympathetic strike.

Mr. Winfield told how the council sent a statement to the press asking for a strike to be called in law and order, how, owing to danger of food shortage, representatives were sent to the city hall, where a joint committee was formed, which was to send messengers and creamery men back to work.

A mediation committee was formed, which gathered all sorts of incorrect data as to the form of collective bargaining demanded. Labor leaders despised these inaccurate views, and the witness, and the committee drafted a form of collective bargaining which suited labor but not the employers. The situation was further complicated, he thought, by the determination of the police commission to have policemen sign an agreement making it impossible to affiliate with other unions. "This measure in connection with public utilities may be right or wrong," said Mr. Winfield, "but it was a wedge driven into our front."

WHAT DOMINIONS DID DURING WAR

Under-Secretary for Colonies Emphasizes Immensity of Their War-Time Efforts.

Reuter Cable. London, July 31.—Lieut.-Col. L. E. C. Amery, under-secretary for the colonies, speaking on the colonial effort during the war, emphasized the immensity of the war-time patriotic efforts of fellow subjects overseas. It might be gauged by noting the sum total of military efforts in the field before armistice day either measuring by the number of lives sacrificed, the numbers of the enemy killed or captured, or the total number of hours spent in the trenches. Both Canada and Australia individually contributed greater military efforts than the United States with a population of over 100,000,000 people. Moreover, the efforts of the crown colonies were far greater than those realized. In every part of the empire the whites contributed as high a quota as any community in the world. Over two-thirds of the males of East Africa and Rhodesia also took the field.

All the colonies substantially contributed to the cost of the war from revenue, declared Col. Amery, incurring liability larger than prudence allowed. Therefore, he hoped this would be remembered when redevelopment and reconstruction in the colonies was being considered.

Col. Amery declared that British colonial administration was the best in the world before the war, and stated that the empire was greatly improved on, especially as regards large territories assigned to Great Britain as mandatory. To accomplish this, the colonial office service must be brought to the highest state of efficiency.

Railways in the crown colonies must be multiple, said Col. Amery. In the dominions there were 13 miles of railways per thousand square miles; in the crown colonies only 4.5 miles. Hence there was a prima facie case for a very great program of railway construction. Col. Amery was of the opinion that every railway spent in developing the colonies would bring manifold return in a very short time.
