BRIDANT CASE ADJOURNED. Needed Exhibits Were Not on Hand - Will Resume Monday.

Owing to the exhibits in the case not being ready the charge against Edmund Bridant and Lillian Miller of being contributors to the death of Mrs. Agnes Bridant was laid over yesterday until Monday at 11 a.m. after some evidence by Coroner Johnson, who testified again that the woman had died from septic poisoning. Mr. Robinette asked bail, which was refused.

A hint of new evidence to come is given by Sergeant Duncan, who intimates that it will deal with the manner of the woman's treatment by her husband.

ARMY AND NAVY VETERANS. To-day marks the 18th anniversary of the founding of the Army and Navy Veterans in this city, contemporary with the golden jubilee of the late Queen Victoria. On that occasion the meeting was held in Albert Hall with George Cooke as chairman. John Nunn was elected president and William Brown and F. J. Robinson vice-presidents. Mr. McFarlane and George Cooke were elected trustees, and Alex. Watson outside and J. Miles inside guard. Many others were present on that occasion, of whom only Chaplain John Nunn and F. J. Robinson survive among the officers.

TO CLEAR CONTRACT TANGLE COUNCIL TO MEET AUG. 22

Mayor Goes to Halifax to Attend Municipal Union - Matters at the City Hall.

The special meeting of the city council to deal chiefly with the tangle over the tenders for water mains belonging to the pressure system will be held on Aug. 22 or 23, not on Aug. 20, as had been announced. The mayor, who, with Controller Ward and the city engineer, will leave for Halifax to-day to attend the convention of the Canadian Municipal Association, expects to return on the 20th inst., but he said last night that it would be necessary to hold a meeting of the board of control before council was called together. Several other matters will come up at this meeting, including the terms of agreement for the extension of the Avenue Road line by the street railway, which were to have been submitted yesterday, but were delayed.

Mayor Longworth expresses regret at being called away from the city at a time when an important issue has sprung up between the carpenters of the city and their employers.

Will Sue the Railway. It was definitely decided by the board of control yesterday to sue the street railway company for damages done water mains by electrolysis, and to order measures taken to prevent further damage. General Manager Fleming says the company will take reasonable steps to stop the damage if found to be caused by the railways wires.

Kissed Mayor's Hand. Some what emotional scenes attended the meeting of the board of control yesterday of a deputation of 150 Jewish junk pedlars to protest against the cutting off of a license for the storage of rags at 108-110 PEARL-STREET. There were present also a number of wholesale rag dealers, and a heated discussion took place, the pedlars asserting with many gesticulations that the wholesalers were trying to force the independent storage out of business in order to control the market for themselves.

A joyous tumult followed the assent of the mayor that the case of the pedlars would be treated on its merits, his worship's hand being seized and fervently kissed by one of the spokesmen in a transport of feeling.

$15,000 for Roadways. An additional appropriation of $15,000 for roadways has been asked of the board of control by the acting city engineer, who will supply a statement of the number of roadways requiring repairs, with the cost in each case.

The Zoo at Riverdale Park has been added to by five baby raccoons, the litter being discovered by Charles Carter yesterday morning.

Commissioner of Industries Joseph Thompson will have as his headquarters the offices on the city hall main floor, east side, formerly occupied by the property department.

To Ask Power Commission. The Ontario power commission will be asked to give prices for power on the basis of the city's taking 30,000 horse-power, the city engineer's recommendation being yesterday adopted by the board of control.

The city architect and Ald. Fleming, chairman of the grounds committee of the exhibition association, will go to St. Louis to inspect an iron building, 700 feet long by 170 feet wide, with a view to having it transported to Toronto if found worth while for use as an arena. The structure is one of the exposition buildings, and can be had for scrap iron prices.

In redecorating the mayor's office $1500 will be spent, Elliott & Sons having been granted the contract at that figure.

LONGWORTH PUSHES MADE CREDIT BELONGS TO WIFE He Never Talked Business, Yet Caused Catawba Boom in London.

Nicholas Longworth has shown us that a man may be both an ideal husband and a most excellent man of business. The woman all were charmed with the self-effacing devotion he displayed for "Princess Alice," being seemingly quite content with the obsequious adulation piled full upon the president's daughter.

And now it is the men's turn to confess their admiration for the skill and ingenuity he has shown. Everybody in America knows that he is a large owner of Catawba wine. That is a variety of the grape product which has been practically unknown here. But for the fact that he declined to remain in ignorance of it, how he managed it is his own secret, but it is certain that soon after the King met him his majesty ordered several cases of the Longworth brand of sparkling Catawba. The King's physician, Dr. Francis, pronouncing a highly scientific benediction upon it. That counts for a great deal, about the same time, in some mysterious fashion, the managers of several of the big London hotels awakened to the discovery that they had been grossly negligent in failing to place Catawba on their wine lists.

Sir Thomas Lipton has been made acquainted with its delectable qualities, and will sell it at his innumerable shops. So one result of Mr. and Mrs. Longworth's visit will be to bring in a new and yet untapped market for the wine. He never talked Catawba to any of the people he met in society. But somehow they heard of it, and wanted to try it.

Yankee Bore Business Woman. The Manchester's arrival in London at this belated hour of the season has given rise to a great deal of comment, and every one is asking, "What has brought them?" They are there solely on business which the Duchess is arranging. There never has been a viewing of her husband's creditors, and in her own inimitable manner is taking up matters with them. These new arrivals are known among duchesses such a business woman as her grace. It must be an inheritance from her Christiania father. Her powers of persuasion, her diplomacy and her tact, prove irresistible with everyone she touches.

The house the duke and duchess are living in is in unfashionable South Kensington, a commodious mansion, and every Queen's-gate. They decided to take a large house, as the duchess would have all her children with her, but they have no intention of entertaining for Consuelo, Duchess of Manchester, has put her foot down, as she can do, and says "Kiss," who is the duke, is to pay every penny of his debts before he spends any more money. This is a sentiment in which the young duchess quite concurs.

The Manchester's town house used to be in Great Stanhope-street, which runs off the Piccadilly end of Park Lane, a perfect position, the residence was an ordinary one enclosed by a high wall. The Duchess, called it "a miserable little hole," and refused to live in it. It was sold some years ago and says the Duke and Duchess of Manchester have had no town house.

Astor's Costly Concert. William Waldorf Astor's two private concerts this season at his magnificent town residence in Carlton-terrace surpassed all his previous efforts in his per form of entertainment. It is a fact that he paid Paderewski $10,000 for his services. In the first instance the pianist demanded $5000, and a second offer of $7500 he also rejected, but a raise of another $2500 convinced the American composer, who told me the story expressed it. As an additional inducement a suite of apartments was offered to him.

But, despite the great consideration shown him, the chrysanthemum haired professor declined to mingle with the guests, and retired to his rooms after playing. Princess Louise, the only member of royalty who is on anything like equal terms with the ex-American multi-millionaire, was exceedingly anxious to make Paderewski's acquaintance, but it was a case of Mohammed going to the mountain. She had to go upstairs to meet him after the second concert. It was an almost unheard-of concession on the part of a princess of the blood royal, but in these days genius can exact homage even from the most exalted rank.

Cannot Understand Object. The host, who was wretched health, received his guests seated in a chair at the entrance of the great ball room, where the entertainment was to be held. The ple wondered why on earth he should go to the trouble of giving two such costly entertainments to a lot of people, for of whom he cares nothing, and who certainly have no liking for him, when anyone could see with half an eye he was unacceptably bored himself. But he appears to regard it as a sacred duty each June or July to give his London pianist for two nights with a host of swell folk whom he scarcely ever sees on these occasions.

The invitations to both concerts are invariably issued on the one card, and, year in and year out the same persons come. Contrary to the usual custom, the names of the distinguished performers are never included in the invitations. But his guests know that they will be treated to the best the market affords. Each concert cost him some $10,000. The two nights were two finish up Mr. Astor's entertaining for the year. His duty to society he regards as fulfilled. And society, for its part, is well content to leave him severely alone.

Lady Mary. A REAL RAFFLES. A young, sprucely-attired, and well-educated man, who was recently sentenced to two years hard labor in the name of Henry Lewis, is one of the most remarkable criminals who have come under the notice of the English police in recent years.

Barely 25 years old, he has, single-handed, caused more burglary scares than many hardened thieves twice his age.

On a previous occasion—in October, 1904—this young fellow was ordered a year's imprisonment in the name of Monks. His real name is neither Monks nor Lewis, but that of a well-known and highly-respected inhabitant of Kilburn, by whom he was given a good college education, and who subsequently secured for him an excellent situation in an accountant's office.

The young man's first conviction was in connection with a number of mysterious burglaries in Hampstead, Kilburn, and the Westbourne Park district. For months the detectives were baffled, the reason being that "Lewis" invariably worked at night, selected only the most valuable and easily portable goods, and disposed of them immediately in the pawnbrokers' establishments opened on the following morning, and before the police had been notified of the robberies. Moreover, during the whole of the time the mysterious robberies were going on he was working assiduously during the daytime in a similar situation.

Despite his busy days and nights, the young fellow managed to find opportunities for a good deal of love-making. One of his conquests, a young girl, was courting no fewer than four young women in highly respectable positions. The country, and frequently the city, week-ends at her home. Not the least
