Coulter was otherwise engaged or away when required, Dr. Rutherford would be empowered to act as medical attendant. The fact that Dr. Coulter has been mentioned for a Government position, Mr. Hartman said, had nothing to do with his bringing in the motion.

Mr. Evans said that, as Dr. Coulter is likely to secure a Government position, this motion looks as though there might be a scheme to get Dr. Rutherford the appointment.

Mr. Woodcock couldn't see any nocessity for the change, as it is Dr. Coulter's duty to secure someone to perform his duties if he is otherwise engaged.

Messrs, Pugsley and Stokes also opposed the motion, Messrs, Ramsden and Baker speaking in favor of making the change.

The motion was finally declared lost.

THE NEGRO CELT IN CANADA. Many attempts have been made to find kipling tripping in his facts, but so far at have failed. His knowledge of different countries and their peoples, of the sea and all that is in it or on it, of the jungle and its creatures, of battles, armies and soldiers, of social life when he chooses to touch upon it, of men, women and bables, in short, of everything upon which he has written, is simply marvelous. Indeed, so wonderful is this gift of his that it partakes of the nature of wizardry, and to many it not unnaturally seems impossible that "one small head could carry all" he knows. His knowledge is by no means merely superficial, as he has shown time and again; and the ease with which he acquires and handles technical knowledge has simply be-wildered his critics. In "Mr. Andrew's Hymn," for example, the various parts of the engines in the great ocean liner are touched upon so deftly and naturally that, instead of being tiresome, as they would have been in the hands of another writer, they fall into the lines with the utmost ease and grace, and, in fact, occur in one of the most musical parts of the poem.

S. R. Gardiner, the historical writer, will soon have ready his two new books: "Cromwell's Place in History" and "What the Gunpowder Plot Was." The latter is a reply to the charge of a Jesuit priest that the "plot" was largely a fiction.

Richard Mansfield, the actor, is going to make a plunge as author, and his first book, "Blown Away," will soon be published in the Boston and Maine Road Besulted in that magazine, bas reference to the descent of "the Couple with uniforms, to be worn asking that the county constables in Nova Scotla who do not speak the Gaelic, the editor of The Marine Journal of New York questioned the truth of the statement that the "plot" was largely a fiction.

Richard Mansfield, the actor, is going to make of ex-slaves in Nova Scotla who do not speak the Gaelic, the editor of The Marine settlements in Cape Breton, and certainly none who use the tongue of the Highland Scotch. He disposes of the matter with Yankee elegance thus: "As a matter of fact, although the people of Cape Breton are largely Highland Scotch, negroes are as scarce among them as stunks, which means the latter are none on the Island." The Herald of North Sydney, Cape Breton, reprinted the article from The Marine Journal, and the result was that the editor of The Marine Journal, and the result was that the editor of the Exeter depot land the private the editor of The Marine Journal, and the result was that the editor of the Marine Journal, and the result was that the editor of the Marine Journal, and the result was that the editor of the Marine Journal, and the result was that the editor of the Marine Journal, and the result was that the editor of the Marine Journal, and the result was that the editor of the Marine Journal, and the result was that the editor of the Marine Journal was wrong, and that as usual Klotling was right. Poste Restante. Canso, Nova Scotia, Feb. 5, 1807.

To the Editor of McClure's Magazine:
The enclosed cutting from The North Sydney Herald, Cape Breton, speaks for itself. Rudyard Kipling does not err. In defence of his statement I beg to state that there are two families of Gaelic-speaking negroes at West Bay, in Cape Breton; also another family at Whycocomagh—both places in Inverness County, Cape Breton. Doubtless others have advised you of this but in order to preclude any chances of non-acquaintance on this subject. I have taken the liberty to send you this information. Your obedient servant, Danvers Osborn.

It is curious that facts of this kind should be thus brought into notice by a man who has seen so little of our country, but who in a very short time has made himself masses the of his subject. It is characteristic of Kipling, however, that when he brings his all-seeing eyes and keen mind to bear upon any one thing, if even for a glance, he sees and understands more than the majority of people would in a life-time of study.
