POETRY. BEAUTY AND TIME. BEAUTY AND TIME. BY NISS PARDOR. Beauty went out one summer day, To rove in Pleasure's bower ; And much she sported in her way With every opening flower. At length she reached a myrtle shade, And through the branches peeping, She saw, among the blossoms laid, Time most profoundly sleeping.

His head was pillowed on his wings, For he had furled his pinions, To linger with the lovely things In Pleasure's bright dominions; His scythe and glass aside were cast; "How softly he reposes!" Cried Beauty, as she idly passed, And covered him with roses.

Time woke :---" Away," he kindly said; "Go, triffe with the Graces ; You know that I was never made To toy with pretty faces. "Tis pleasant in so sweet a clime To rest awhile from duty ; Fil sleep a little more," said Time : " No, do wake up !" said Beauty.

He rose; but he was grim and old; She felt her roses wither, His scythe upon her heart was cold, His hour-glass made her shiver; Her young cheeks shrank, her hair turn'd gre Of grace he had bereft her; And when he saw her droop away, He spread his wings, and left her.

And thus I point my simple rhyme, It is the Minstrel's duty ; Beauty should never sport with Time, Time always witheis Beauty!

Time always withins Beauty! Good News.—The best piece of intelli-genee received by the late arrival is, that tight lacing has been abolished by the fash-jourables of Paris, and the human form di-vine is to be left in the same shape that na-ture moulds it, and culture can bring it to.— As our countrywomen adopt with avidity all the Paris fashions, good, bad, and indifferent, it is hoped that they will not be so unfashion-able as to neglect this. We shall then have no pressure except that upon the money mar-ket. The relief which this intelligence will give is of so general a nature that we congra-tulate the entire sex.—Albany Argus.

WOOD GRAVEL FOR GARDEN WALKS .-Wood GRAVEL FOR GARDEN WALKS.— Campeachy and Pernambuco woods, redu-ced to small pieces after the dye has been extracted, form an admirable substance for gravel garden walks, to the surface of which they communicate the warmith, soft-ness and clasticity of a carpet. They have long been employed in many parts of Bel-gium. LONDON IN 1759.—The middle of a paved street was generally occupied with the kennel, and the sides of the carriage way were full of absolute holes, where the rickety coach was often stuck as in a quagmire. Some of the leading streets, even to the time of George II., were almost as impassable as the avenue of a new American town. The only road to the Houses of Parliament before 1759 was through King-street and Union-street, which were in so miserable a state, that faggots were thrown into the ruts on the days on which the King went to Parlia-
