

CHEERFULNESS IS SOLDIER'S MOTTO

Good Humored Even in Midst of Danger

Incidents From the Front

Practical Joking of a Grim Nature; Humor Even in Their Last Wills and Testaments

"Are we downhearted? No!" would seem to continue as the watchword of the British army at the front. Stories are constantly arriving by mail and from newspaper correspondents to show the wonderful cheerfulness of the soldiers. In some respects war does not seem to change human nature. If a fellow is of a cheerful, fun-loving disposition at home, he will be found of a cheerful, fun-loving nature even in the midst of a fight, though there will be a grimmer quality in his humor. As an example, we have this story from the Brooklyn Eagle:

Both Canadians and Anzacs delight in the nocturnal raids made almost every night on the close-lying German trenches. On one of these recently a Canadian lieutenant worked his way unseen to an enemy dugout and suddenly peered over the top. It was a nasty, rainy night, cold and damp, and a group of Germans were seated about a little stove.

"How many of you fellows down there?" called out the Canadian in a raucous voice.

"None," came back a startled and ambiguous reply.

"Well, where that among you," shouted the Canadian as he hurled a bomb into the midst and threw himself flat on the ground to avoid the effects of the explosion.

Two Strange Wills.

It appears that when Canadians are embarking for active service they are given pay-books in which their allowances are entered from time to time. The last page is a will form in blank. On the body of one young soldier killed in action the following will was found: "I give everything I have to the Home for Stray Cats, London, providing they do not take in any more black cats."

Another Canadian wrote: "If I should die—(cheers)—I will everything to my mother—(loud and prolonged cheers)." This will, too, was held to be valid. Another young Canadian of the Flying Corps, we are told, had not written home for months, and finally received this cable: "No letters for weeks. Is anything wrong with the boy?" He replied (collect): "Very serious matter. Boy absolutely broke. Send much money."

A Canadian Story.

The story is told of a popular young Canadian officer in mufti and on crutches who appeared one day in the lounge of a London hotel, where there were several brother officers on leave. In reply to an invitation to "have something," he was obliged to refuse, saying that he had a crippled friend to look after. Presently the crippled friend hove in sight, also on crutches, his right leg gone at the knee. "You see," explained the first comer, "we tossed a coin to see which one would look after the other and I lost." There is a rule in London that if a man in emergency cases ambulances must not drive more than five miles an hour. This slow pace is designed for the comfort of the wounded, but sometimes it has the opposite effect. A hard hit Tommy was being conveyed to a hospital, and after a while he raised himself upon one elbow and said to the driver: "I say, would you mind driving a bit faster. This ain't no bally funeral."

He was blown some distance and seriously injured by a German shell. He recovered as he was being lifted on a stretcher, and murmured as he fainted again, "Home, James."

Anzac vs. Canadian.

Soldier stories of amusing happenings at the front are many. There is considerable rivalry among the Canadians and the Anzacs. The English think they are both such good soldiers there is little to choose between them. This incident happened at a canteen some time ago when the Australians first came to the western front. Several Canadians were when they espied the wide-brimmed campaign hats that distinguish the Anzacs from all the other soldiers. The Canadians gave their fellow-colonials a hearty welcome and an equally hearty invitation to "have something." These fraternal details having been attended to, a Canadian turned to one of the Australians.

"When did you fellows come over?" he asked.

"Just got in this morning."

"Well, what are you going to do?" This was too good an opening for the Anzac.

"Oh," he said in a "swanky" tone, "we came over to finish what you fellows started."

"Humph," replied the Canadian, "it's a wonder you didn't finish what you started yourself down at Gallipoli."

Then the trouble began. It was a Dennybrook affair for a time, but eventually peace was declared with renewed and mutual respect for colonial fighting ability.

It is said that wounded soldiers home from the front, some of them so seriously hurt that they will never be able to fight again, resent curious questioning as to how they received their injuries. They do not feel that they ought to be stared at as though they were freaks. They reply briefly to questions, answering that they were hurt "somewhere in No Man's Land." If the questioner appears to be too credulous he is apt to be regarded with a thrilling but highly imaginative account of the incident.

IT'S A SHIP BUT IT'S ALSO A GOLD MINE

Amherst Men Gathering Big Profits from Schooner Launched on the Parramatta Shore.

(Amherst Guardian.)

Speaking of gold mines, what about this one?—A short time ago an Amherst man invested a sum of money in a vessel built and launched on the Parramatta shore. Within ten weeks after the schooner took the water he received in profits forty-three per cent. of the amount he had invested. Since that time he has received another $200 as his share of further profits earned by the vessel.

And that's not all. Another Amherst man invested $500 in the same schooner. On Saturday, quite a bit less than a year since the ship was launched, he told The Guardian that he had received returns amounting to $1,000, or better than fifty-three per cent. More than this, both these gentlemen and the others in the county who invested in the schooner still have the pleasant prospect of further large returns from the ship's voyages. With the present demand for bottoms and the consequent high freights the shareholders have every reason to expect to gather generous profits for some time to come and still have their stock in the vessel when normal shipping conditions come back again.

There's no gold mine doing better for its owners than this Cumberland owned schooner.

'PHONE MEN IN THE FRONT LINE

They Follow up a Charge And Lay Wires Immediately

It's Very Risky Work; Instrument Installed as Near as Possible to Company Commander's Headquarters

Telephone operators in the trenches are seldom in the limelight. More often than not they are in unshelved dugouts. Their services are of vital importance in up-to-date warfare, and well do they perform them.

A party of telephone operators, or signallers as they are technically known, is attached to a company occupying a front-line trench. The dugout where they and their instruments are installed is as near the company commander's headquarters as can be conveniently arranged. It must be remembered that a dug-out is seldom a haven of rest, and never of safety. During a bombardment a dug-out is quite the most unhealthy place that can be selected.

The British trench-telephonists have just learned that they are to go "over the parapet" in the morning. The British guns which according to custom, had sunk into silence with the setting of the sun, suddenly resume their bombardment of the enemy's lines, which they have carried on incessantly during the day.

In almost instant answer to the booming challenge, the Boche guns belch back their reply.

The game of chance inside and outside the dug-out goes on uninterrupted till a time arrives when no answer can be obtained on the telephone.

"Wier's broken," ejaculates the operator holding the receiver.

Following a Chance

Without a word the other two, snatching up their rifles and tools, pass out into the white light of the star-shells. As they clamber over the rear parapet and trudge along, following the wire, more dangerous shells are falling with monotonous regularity to right and left of them, and at last they pass unharmed out of the shell zone into comparative safety. At length they reach a shell-hole, the cause of their unwatched-for prominence. The work of splicing a new piece of wire to the broken ends is soon accomplished.

Then they retrace their steps to the dug-out—and the danger zone.

Luckily it was the only breakage that occurred during the night.

The rising sun is just peeping over the horizon. In the British trench the captain stands eyeing his wrist-watch. Suddenly the captain raises his eyes from his watch, and with a quick scramble is on the parapet.

"Over boys!" he shouts.

The three telephone operators, in accordance with orders are waiting till their comrades have taken the hostile trench.

One carries a spool of wire which he

What groceries did Brown advertise?

JOHN BROWN is noted for being the lowest merchant in town because of the novel way in which he advertises and crosses his bets. It is one that will give much amusement and entertainment to every reader of the paper. Look at this picture of Mr. Brown's store, and you will see his idea. He carefully covered the whole of the store, barrels and bins containing fourteen of the staple lines of his stock. Then he engaged a clever cartoonist and had him draw a series of puzzle pictures to be used as labels to represent the true names of the hidden goods. The puzzle pictures are of the spirit of the idea. At one end of the store, picture No. 1 is to be found. At the other end, picture No. 2 is to be found. Then picture No. 3 is to be found.
