POOR DOCUMENT

ON SOAP,

IN RELATION TO THE COMPLEXION.

FROM AN ARTICLE BY

Dr. ANDREW WILSON, F.R.S.E.,

Lecturer on Health under the "Combe Trust;"
Lecturer on Physiology at the Edinburgh University;
Editor of "Health."

"One important caution should be given, and that is concerning the use of soaps. I would strongly advise all who care for their skin to eschew the use of common soap, which simply roughens and injures the skin, and, if you will be advised by me, I would say never buy those artificially coloured and odoriferous abominations commonly sold under the name of 'Scented' or 'Fancy Soaps' which are the frequent causes of skin eruptions. If I am prepared to recommend any one soap to you, as a satisfactory and scientifically prepared article, I would certainly advise you to buy and use 'Pears' Soap.' Not merely from personal use can I recommend this soap, but I am well content to shelter myself under the names and authority of the late Sir Erasmus Wilson, F.R.S., President of the Royal College of Surgeons; of Doctor Stevenson Macadam, or of Professors Redwood and Attfield, the eminent analytical and chemical lecturers at the Pharmaceutical Society of Great Britain, who testify to its entire purity. Furthermore, I believe it to be very economical, for it contains no free water, and in this respect differs from all other soaps; hence a cake of 'Pears' is really all soap and not soap and water. I know cases of irritable skin which the whole tribe of much-vaunted 'Fancy Soaps' failed to allay, but which disappeared under the use of Pears' Soap, and for the nursery and for the delicate skin of infancy no better or more soothing soap can possibly be used. There can be no doubt that in respect of the care of children, attention to the skin is specially required. If common soaps are irritating to the skin of the adult, (as they unquestionably are), they are doubly and trebly injurious to the delicate skin of the infant and young child. I can vouch that the soap I am recommending is not merely a safe but an advantageous one. It does not irritate the skin; but, while servings as a detergent and cleanser, also acts as an emollient."

A MARRIAGE AT SEA.

BY W. CLARK RUSSELL,

Author of "The Wreck of the Grosvenor," Marooned," "An Ocean Tragedy," etc.

Continued.

I followed the man into the saloon, and was led right aft, where stood two large cabins. On entering I found Captain Parsons sitting at a table covered with nautical instruments, books, writing-materials, and so forth. A lighted bracket-lamp near the door illuminated the interior, and gave me a good view of the hearty little fellow and his sea-furniture of coi, lockers, chest of drawers, and wearing-apparel that slid to and fro upon the bulkhead as it dangled from pegs. His air was grave, and his countenance as full of importance as with such features as his, it was capable of being. Having asked me to take a seat, he surveyed me thoughtfully for some moments in silence.

"Young gentleman," said he, at last, "before we man the windlass I have to beg you'll not take amiss any questions I may put. Whatever I ask won't be out of curiosity. I believe I can see my way to doing you and your pretty young lady a very considerable service; but I shall first want all the truth you may think proper to give me."

I heard him with some astonishment. What could he mean? What service had he in contemplation to render me?

"The truth of what, Captain Parsons?" said I.

"Well, now your relations with Miss Bellassys: it's an elopement, I believe?"

"That is so," I answered, hardly knowing whether to laugh or feel vexed.

"Though the young lady," he continued, "is not one of my passengers in the sense that the rest of 'em are, she is aboard my ship, and as though by the Divine ordering committed to my care, as are you and every man jack of the two hundred and four souls who are sailing with me. Of course you know that we ship-masters have very great powers."

I merely inclined my head, wondering what he was driving at.

"A ship-master," he proceeded, "is lord paramount, quite the cock of his own walk, and nothing must crow where he is. He is responsible for the safety and comfort, for the well-being, moral, spiritual, and physical, of every creature aboard his ship, no matter what the circumstances under which that creature came aboard, whether by paying cabin-money, by shipwreck, or by signing articles. Miss Rellassys has come into my hands, and it's my duty, as master of this ship, to see that she's done right by."

The conflict of twenty emotions rendered me quite incapable to do anything more than stare at him.

"Now, Mr. Barclay," he continued, crossing his bow legs, and wagging a little stunted forefinger in a kindly, admonishing way, "don't be affronted by this preface, and don't be affronted by what I'm going to ask; for if all be plain sailing I shall be able to do you and the young lady a real A1, copper-fastened service"

"Pray ask me any questions you wish, captain," said I.

"This is an elopement, you say?"

"It is."

"Where from?"

"Boulogne-sur-Mer."

"Boulong-sewer-Mare," he repeated. "Was the young lady at school?"

"She was."

"What might be her age now?"

"She will be eighteen next so-and-so" said I giving him the month.

He suddenly jumped up, and I could not imagine what he meant to do, till, pulling open a drawer, he took out a large box of cigars, which he placed upon the table.

"Pray light up, Mr. Barclay," said he, looking to see if the window of his port-hole was open. "They are genuine Havana cigars." He lighted one himself, and proceeded: "What necessity was there for this elopement?"

"Miss Bellassays is an orphan," I answered, still so much astonished that I found myself almost mechanically answering him, as though I were in a witness-box and he were Mr. Justice Parsons in a wig, instead of an old bow-legged, pimple-nosed merchant skipper. 'Her father was Colonel Bellassys, who died some years ago in India. On her mother's death she was taken charge of by her aunt, Lady Amelia Roscoe Lady Amelia's husband named Withycomb Roscoe, whose estate in Kent adjoined my father's, Sir Herbert Barclay, the engineer,"

"D'ye mean the gentleman who built the L—— Docks?

"Yes."

"Oh. indeed I'cried he, looking somewhat impressed. "And how is your father, Mr. Bracley?"

'He died about two and a half years ago,' I replied. "But you have asked me for the truth of this elopement, Captain Parsons. There were constant quarrels between my father and Mr. Withycomb Roscoe over a hedge, or wall, or ditch,—some matter contemptibly insignificant; but if the value of the few rods or perches of ground had been represented by the national debt there could not have been hotter blood, more ill feeling between them. Litigation was incessant, and I am sorry to say that it still continues, though I should be glad to end it."

"A sort of endless lawsuit, I suppose?" said the captain, smoking with enjoyment and listening with interest and respect.

"Just so," said I," finding now a degree of happiness in this candor: it was a kind of easing of my conscience to tell this man my story an absolute strangeras he had been to me but a few hours be fore. "Mr. Roscoe died' and Lady Amelia took a house in London. I met her niece at the house of a friend, and fell in love with her."

"So I should think," exclaimed Captain Parsons. "Never saw a sweeter young lady in all my time."

"Well to cut this part of the story, when her ladyship learned that her neice was in love, and discovered who her sweetheart was,— this occupied a few months, I may tell you,—she packed the girl off to Boulogne, to Mademoiselle Championnet, who keeps a sort of school at that place; though Grace was sent there professedly to learn French. This mademoiselle is some sort of poor connection of Lady Amelia's, a bigoted Catholic, as her ladyship is, and it soon grew clear to my mind from letters I received from Miss Bellasseys despatched in the old romantic fashion——"

"What fashion's that?" called out the captain.

"The bribed housemaid, sir— it soon grew clear to my mind, I say, that Lady Amelia's main object in sending the girl to Mademoiselle Championnet was to get her converted."

"A d——d shame!" cried Captain Parsons.

"Do you need to hear more? said I smiling. "I love the girl, and she loves me; she was an orphan, and I did not consider the aunt a right and proper guardian for her; she consented to elope, and we did elope, and here we are, captain."

"And you were bound to Penzance, I understand?"

"Yes."

"Why Penzance?"

"To get married at a church in that district."

"Who was going to marry ye?"

"A cousin of mine, the Reverend Frank Howe,—of course after we had fulfilled the confounded legal conditions which obstruct young people like ourselves in England-"

'And what are the legal conditions? It's so long since I was married that I forget 'em," said the captain.

"Residence, as it is called; then the consent of her ladyship, as Miss Bellassys is under age."

"But she isn't going to consent, is she?"

"How can she refuse, after our association in the yacht, and here?"

It took him some time to understand; he then shut one eye and said, "I see."

We pulled at our cigars in silence as we gazed at each other. The evening had blackened into night; a silver star or two slid in the open port, through which came the washing noise of the water as it swept eddying and seething past the bends into the wake of the ship; now and again the rudder jarred harshly, and there was a monotonous tread of feet overhead. We were at the extreme after end of the vessel, where the heave of her would be most sensibly felt, and she was still courtesying with some briskness, but I scarcely heeded the motion, so effectually had the mad behavior of the Spitfire cured me of all tendency to nausea.

"And now, Mr. Barclay," exclaimed the captain,after a silence of a minute or two, "I'll explain why I have made so free as to ask you for your story. It's the opinion of Mrs. Barstow and Miss Mogradore that Miss Bellassys and you ought to be married right away off. It's a duty that's owing to the young lady. You can see it for yourself, sir; Her situation, young gentleman," he added with emphasis, "is not what it ought to be."

Women are not slow to comprehend. They're quick. They're alive, and yet it was a man who discovered the one remedy for their peculiar ailments. The man was Dr. Pierce.

The discovery was his "Favorite Prescription"—the boon to delicate women. Why go round "with one foot in the grave" suffering in silence—misunderstood—when there's a remedy at hand that isn't an experiment, but which is sold under the guarantee that if you are disappointed in any way in it, you can get your money back by applying to the makers.

We can hardly imagine a woman not trying it. Possibly it may be true of one or two—but we doubt it. Women are ripe for it. They must have it. Think of a perscription and nine out of ten waiting for it. Carry the news to them!

The seat of sick headache is not in the brain. Regulate the stomach and you cure it. Dr. Pierce's Pellets are the Little Regulators.

A Belgian shipping paper states that a steamer bound to the West coast of Africa had on board 11 missionaries, 460 tons of gunpowder, 11 cases of gin, and 10,000 casks of rum.

What is a Day's Labor?

One day's work for a healthy liver is to secrete three and a half pounds of bile. If the bile secretion be deficient, constipation, ensues; if profuse, biliousness and jaundice arise. Burdock Blood Bitters is the most perfect liver regulator known in medicine for preventing and curing all liver troubles.

'Tis Hard to Smile When the Heart is Breaking.

'Tis hard to smile when the heart is breaking,
'Tis hard to rejoice at death's leave taking:
But oh! to the christian's heart I find,
Each grievous wound is golden lined.

'Tis hard to smile when the heart is breaking,
And harder to join in a merry making,
But oh! there is joy in the hope that follows
The thought His victory death up swallows.

'Tis hard to smile when the heart is breaking,
When hopes are blighted just at waking,
But the secret of finding cure relief
Is unto the Lord to give thy grief.

So hold it not, as some precious treasure,
Until it runs beyond life's measure,
And then be found like a broken flower
To die in an untimely hour.

Then Lord to Thee our hearts we give;
We who on this fair earth do live
Consumed by day an l night with grief
And know with giving comes relief.

For though 'tis hard to-day to smile in sorrow,
We will rejoice in hope to-morrow
For longest nights have e'er an end
And so each grief to joy will bend.

DESPERATE ATTEMPT AT SUICIDE.

Soucci the Canadian Criminal, attemps to Hang Himself.

CONCORD, Oct. 21.—John Soucci, who is in jail awaitng extradition to the province of Quebec to answer charges of breaking, horse stealing and rape, made a desperate but unsuccessful attempt at suicide last night by hanging with his bedclothes. When Soucci was brought here he told the city marshal he would not go back to Canada alive.

GREED AND GAIN THEIR OBJECT.

There are in Canada, as well as in other parts of the civilized world, many storekeepers and traders whose soul aim is the making of large profits. This is accomplished in many cases by keeping for sale lines of goods which are made and put up to look like the first class article. These storekeepers do not for a moment consider the consumers welfare and comfort, as long as the profits are large and sales go on.

This kind of business is plainly subversive, and to not only the interests of the consumers, but to the retailers as well; and these retailers are forcibly reminded of it, by loss of business, and sometimes failure.

It is only necessary here to mention one class of goods that all Druggists and Grocers sell, we refer to package dyes for domestic dyeing. While the genuine and long tested Diamond Dyes are sold everywhere, yet there are some traders who sell the common, crude dyes which are perfectly worthless, simply because their profits are larger than can be realized from the sale of the best goods—Diamond Dyes. Diamond Dyes cost the retailer more than the common crude dyes, but are sold to the consumer at the same price. Ladies are often sadly deceived in this way and suffer great loss and inconvenience through using the worthless dyes. Ladies can rid themselves of this trouble, and avoid loss of time and materials if they insist upon getting Diamond Dyes from their Drugist or Grocer. Do not be influenced by the false statement that other dyes are just as good as Diamond Dyes; it is the big profit these men are looking after, not your interests, ease and general comfort.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

Traders, Manufacturers and owners of Weights, Measures and Weighing Machines generally are specially requested to read carefully the following instructions and act accordingly:

1. The Weights and Measures Act provides for a regular biennial inspection of all Weights and Measures used for trade purposes, as well as for irregular inspections of the same, which may be made at any time when deemed necessary by the inspector, and it also imposes a heavy penalty on any trader or other person who wilfully obstructs or impedes an inspector or assistant inspector in the performance of his duty under said Act, or who refuses to produce the whole of his weights and measures for inspection when called upon to do so by an inspecting officer.

2. Every trader, manufacturer and owner of weights, measures, and weighing machines when paying moneys to Inspectors or Assistant Inspectors of Weights and Measures for verification fees, is entitled to, and is specially requested to demand from the officer who makes the inspection, an official certificate ("Form O, 5" with the words "Original for the Trader" printed at the head thereof) properly filled out and stamped, and also at the same time to carefully ascertain whether or not the stamps attached to such certificate represent exactly the value the amount of cash paid. Traders are requested to bear in mind that certificates of verification are of no value whatever unless stamps covering the full amount of fees charged are attached.

3. Owners and holders of these official certificates are specially requested to keep them carefully for two years, and in order to secure their safe keeping it would be advisable to placard them in their places of business in the manner in which ordinary license certificates are done, for it must be distinctly understood that all traders who are unable to produce their properly stamped certificates, when asked to do so by an inspector or assistant inspector, may, in all probability, have to pay over again their verification fees.

TELEPHONE.

To Subscribers of N. B. Telephone Co. L'td., St. John.

A COMPLETE list of our Subscribers will be issued at an early date giving the names of all parties having Telephones with their corresponding numbers, but before doing so we intend re-distributing our wires upon the switch boards in the exchange so that the busiest wires will be evenly distributed over the whole number of boards, and the work of attending calls will be more equally divided between the operators and upon the distribution of the new list. We would respectfully request subscribers to call by Messengers and discontinue calling by names. This change is necessary to ensure a prompter service as the numbers are plainly before the operators while the names have to be memorized or searched for in the list.
