INCREASED TAXATION.

To the Editor:-Extravagance in the administration of public affairs during past years has made it necessary to resort to borrowing, until it has now become almost impossible to negotiate further loans, unless there is visible effort at retrenchment and ultimate liquidation of debts. To meet present conditions it is proposed to increase taxes on almost every kind of property. This proposal is not likely to neet with the approval of the already heavily taxed people of the province, neither is it good policy to make British Columbia an expensive province to live in. t is a certain sign that there is some- Before resorting to such drastic methods thing the matter with its stomach or it might be well to look around and see if
