Other men who had been concealed behind the carrage, helped to thrust me imide. Three men came into the carriage with me, the door was shut, and we drove off. The plaster was removed, for I had become insensible; but I was told, the least cry for help and it would be replaced. We traveled rapidly, and found relays of fresh horses every few miles. We never stopped to rest. I "How old are you?"

Was not allowed to leave the carriage, and that he was not the only wretched one. Besides the approaching review and all the extra drills it entailed, Corporal Wimmer had another anxiety, and he applied to Lane to help him. At every review the king was accustomed to ask the newly-enlisted grenadiers three dear children restored to him. "I would thankfully wheel a barrow or be a market-servant for the rest of my days," thought he.
