VERMIFORM APPENDIX

IS INDICATED AGAIN

Charged With Being the Hidden Cause of Many Supposed Stomach Troubles.

NEW YORK, March 9.—London cable despatches received here today say that a fresh series of indictments has been brought against the appendix as a cause of human suffering by the Royal Society of Medicine there.

Twenty-four operation cases, in which the chief symptoms were stomach pains due to an unrecognized disease of the appendix were described. In fifteen cases the operation was undertaken for a supposed ulcer, either in the stomach or in the adjoining intestines only to find that these parts were normal while the appendix was diseased.

Dr. Herbert J. Patterson, who read a paper on the subject suggested the name appendicular gastralgia for the new disease on account of its most prominent symptom, a stomach pain, due to a disease of the appendix.

TORONTO MEN GET THE TEA HABIT

Proper Caper for Them to Drink Together

And They Also Go to Tea Rooms With Their Wives and Their Lady Friends.

(Toronto News)

Has or has not Toronto got the tea habit, or, as the more contemptuous are so fond of calling it, the pink tea craze? It is a question that has not as yet been brought up at the Parliament Buildings, but it is one of national importance. Of course, the women have had it from time immemorial. It is of men who drink it each day at five o'clock that enquiry was made. Why do they do it, where do they do it, and, above all, where on earth did they get the idea?

You finish work in the afternoon feeling like a sponge that has been mixed up with a steam roller, coming out underneath. You feel that a Scotch and soda or even a glass of beer is the only thing worth living for. What happens? Your wife has just remembered that she forgot to tell you what baby said this morning, and you trot over to one of those "delightful little tea rooms" have a cup of nice hot tea, and hear all about it. Then you toddle off home, sober and perhaps satisfied.

IN OLD ENGLAND. Before tea had been brought to England it was known as a country of roast beef and home brew. Along about five in the afternoon the haughty peer was wont to sit before a roaring fire, the codling the lady with his feet, and sip his malmsey or mulled wine, as his taste demanded. Down by the most his faithful retainers would lap up quantities of sack of 'alf and 'alf with a pot boy posted around the corner to keep an eye on the boss. But tea changed all this. Mrs. Peer began to take notice that there was too much noise going on downstairs for a really respectable party. Whereupon she took her little spinning wheel downstairs and regal baby and his friends with that most invidious beverage, tea, until they, too, got the habit.

England is now a country of tea-drinkers. The houses man has it in his office, the swell at his club and the others at one of the tea shops or the A. C. C. which means Aerated Bread Company. The idea spread from France, and "le fit o'clock tea" is the truly chic affair of the day in that land of abstinence and bick.

When the big red injun played up the stream, he did not when his tongue started to hang out was to lean over the side of the ship and see how many typhoid germs he could inhale out of the unboiled wet stuff without musing the blue he had a steady knot. Since our pioneer ancestors brought the little tin dinner pail to this untutored country times have changed. Now the noble redman, clad in one dollar overalls, sits in the bottom of his canoe and smokes a pipe of peace to himself only. Right before him is a little tin growler full of tea, nestling up against the smudge pail which keeps the flies away. Sharp at five o'clock, or thereabouts, the paddle ceases, and everybody takes a little snort.

THE TEA HABIT IN TORONTO. Toronto has been called a great number of names, some complimentary, others not. It depends entirely on where the man comes from and is responsible for the names. One name which it has never received was that of Tea Town, but there is a remote whisper that says it would be a perfectly good name. People do drink tea in Toronto, and after tea is at that. Go into any of the tea rooms, or some of the hotels about 4.30 and look them over. You will see real men, the kind that western novels describe as "six feet two of spotless manhood" drinking away at little cups and cleaning up reams of buttered toast.

And it is not confined to fustians alone who have brought with them the lady of their heart. You will see plenty of business men slip at little round tables and talking over the affairs of nations. You will see young college men, stogons, who have a reputation for busting up fences and stealing harmless, necessary signs, drinking up the innocent hours by the pint. "What are you doing down town?" "Nothing."

"So am I, let's have some tea."

IN THE TEA ROOMS.

And here you have tens of the big reasons for the habit. Nothing to do, nowhere to go, might as well have a cup of tea. At least it provides a place to sit, and something to think about. It is a serious business, this having tea in the afternoon. The first step is to discover where you want to have it. After the necessary ten minutes of pro and con has elapsed you go to it. A lady in a fluffy ruffles cap comes up to you and without warning hands you a slip of paper. If you are new at the business you thank her sweetly, and look carefully at the paper to see what she has to say. The paper is blank. Perhaps after all you have not made such a hit with her, and it is not a billet doux. In a few minutes the haughty young woman returns, sees that you are awfully green and gives you an icy glance. Feeling that you have in some way committed a social error that is absolutely unpardonable, and that the best thing to do is to make a quick get away, you reach for your coat and hat. In the meantime she will tell you that if you write out the su. mital of your wants on two slip of paper, she will do her best to get it for you, or words to that effect.

THE TRIMMINGS. You probably don't know what you want, and ask. If the question is couched in the language of the room, such as "What you got," the chilly stare will return, but don't try to cover up by ducking a handkerchief into your collar. Just show that you really do intend to buy something to eat. Speak up like a little man, and ask for the menu card. From this you can pick out your choices of toast, bread and butter, scones, or lady fingers. When these dainties are acquired, you may sit back in your chair and breathe easily, for she will return no more.

When the newness of the surroundings has worn off, it is not considered had form to take a look around the room instead of keeping your eyes strictly on the pot of tea. If the right place has been picked out, chances are that in the darkest corner there will be two heads very close together and one of them will not wear a hat. There will be a subdued murmur coming out of the corner, but no boisterous conversation. In another corner there may be a crowd of young men, if the few scraps of talk that come to you are something like this: "That rush down the ice simply." "Oh, he's one of the fastest forwards in the business." "Say, did you see that queen on the corner." "Go on, it was to me."

"Do you think she'd smile at you with—" you may be quite sure that they are not hard-headed dollar chasers.

One thing that you will not see down town, however, is the lady fair having tea all by herself, though you may see a man doing that very thing. It is the only way that a man can drink alone and not lose his self-respect. Occasionally two or three girls come in for a cup of tea without having brought a man along to dig up for it, but this is only in cases of extreme carelessness or stress.

There are lots of places to which one of a fashionable life aspires and goes. But if there should be a hanker to see what it feels like to be one of the many who don't care if they do spend forty cents foolishly, why be a real sport, and go out for tea in the afternoon.

"When eating cheese," so the guide book advises, "small morsels of cheese should be placed with the knife on the finger, the piece of bread being the morsel to hold, as cheese should not be taken with the fingers and should not be eaten off the point of the knife." This evidently takes much practice, as the morsel of bread has an embarrassing habit of tumbling off the parcel of bread in the critical periods of its voyage.

CHEAP TO LEARN HOW TO EAT PEAS

How to Win Social Success in London

Oysters are a Difficult Problem, But Advice
Regarding the Knife is A1
Round Aid.

It's all clear now. Any one, apparently, can take down the blue ribbon in the "social success" class in London. All that seems necessary to accomplish this result is to study the "ground rules," just as the golf aspirant ponders over the book of instructions or the person anxious to annex the prizes in bridge whilst circles studies the cautions as to returning a partner's leads.

The way to the society goal has been swept of obstacles ostensibly by the volume entitled "Manners and Rules of Good Society," which has just been issued in a revised edition that is guaranteed to be up to the ultimate minute.

This route book to twenty-four carat manners attempts to tell the eager reader everything from how to be born up to how to meander along the path of life from the cradle to the grave. In all seriousness—for the Englishman takes everything that life affords most seriously, as a rule—it is set down that "peas should be eaten with a fork." That is "ground rule" number one. It would seem, therefore, that the artist who can successfully consume these slightly vegetables by balancing them upon a knife must be counted down and out even before the contest begins. When oysters are eaten in Bucking Palace this rule should be adhered to rigidly.

The shell should be steadied on the plate with the fingers of the left hand; the oysters should not be cut, but eaten whole with a dinner fork. Very many ladies do not like them, while others refuse them under the impression that it is most ladylike not to eat them.

With reference to this latter charge it has been affirmed by the average American who has wrestled with English oysters, which taste like so many chunks of sulphur in comparison with the succulent American bivalve, that the refusal to eat them has designated good judgment rather than any desire to appear more "lady-like." The social aspirant also should give careful attention to handling the cheese course.

"When eating cheese," so the guide book advises, "small morsels of cheese should be placed with the knife on the finger, the piece of bread being the morsel to hold, as cheese should not be taken with the fingers and should not be eaten off the point of the knife." This evidently takes much practice, as the morsel of bread has an embarrassing habit of tumbling off the parcel of bread in the critical periods of its voyage.

Do You Realize What an Important Work the Kidneys Do?

Do you know that every drop of your blood goes to the kidneys hundreds of times every day? Do you know why? To be filtered and purified from its impurities. That is the great work the kidneys have to do. They filter the blood. Then these impurities go to the bladder and are passed out of the body along with the urine.

Do you think it possible for you to be well, unless the kidneys do this work thoroughly?

It is these impurities—this unfiltered blood—that causes backaches, headaches, rheumatism, diabetes, Bright's disease, etc. They poison and interfere with the whole system.

If you have any kidney trouble let Doan's Kidney Pills do for you what they have done for thousands of others. They cure all forms of kidney trouble, and they cure them to stay cured.

Mrs. Maurice Dufon, Charlottetown, P.E.I., writes:—"I was troubled with my kidneys for five years. They were so bad at times that I could not cross the floor for the pain. I went to a doctor, but he did me no good at all. I sent to the druggist and got five boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills, and I am glad to say that after taking them I was cured. I have had no trouble for nearly three years now."

Price 50 cents per box or 3 for $1.25 at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Millburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

In ordering specify "Doan's."

BOSTON, Mass., March 8.—On complaint of Dr. Geo. H. Adams, government pure food inspector, United States Deputy Marshal Mancroft, the afternoon made the largest seizure of cold storage eggs on record. The eggs, which had been removed from their shells and placed in 574 cans, were taken from the warehouse of the Quincy Cold Storage Company in this city. They had been shipped from the Chicago firm of Max Matter and Company, and said by Dr. Adams to have been decomposed and unfit for such use as was intended in bakeries.

Dr. Adams recently made a heavy seizure in New York and another in Philadelphia, but this, consisting of four tons of eggs, is the most extensive yet made in the United States. The government will confiscate and then after having denatured them with carbolic acid, will sell them to tanning establishments where they will be utilized in tanning fine qualities of gloves. The government expects to realize about $1,000 on the seizure.

CLEVER BANTAMS IN TEN-ROUND DRAW.

NEW YORK, N. Y., March 8.—"Knockout" Brown of New York, and Hugo Driscoll, an Irish bantam, fought a clever ten-round draw tonight at the reopening of the Fairmount A. C. Brown fought the milling, but Driscoll avoided his rushes, and at the end of the contest it was difficult to pick the winner.
