diers.
"Why isn't he at the front?" has een a constantly growing question, meraly followed by a demonstration of sometimes resulting in deplorable generaly followed by a demonstration, and sometimes resulting in deplorable incidents.

A young actor was hissed at Lyons when someone in the audience put that question. He asked for a hearing and in a choked voice said that he was obliged to speak of something that he had tried for a long time to ignore himself. "It makes no difference now, though," he said. "The doctors give me only six months more to suffer. It would be a great consolation if I could spend that time fighting for France, but in spite of my supplications, they won't have me."

Many incurables have been obliged in this way to disclose their secret sufferings. Many foreigners also, who passed for French on the boulevards have declared they were Russian, English or Belgian. Deputy Henri Galli of Paris asked why they were not serving their respective countries. The reply was that the Russians were mostly political refugees who would be put into prison instead of the army if they returned, while England has no obligatory service, and many Belgians benefitted from the old law under which circumscription was by lot. Some of them, also, having served in the civic guard, or being married, are exempt under existing laws. Galli remarked that there was cothing to prevent the English and Belgians from enlisting in their own armies, and as for the Russians, there was room for them in the foreign legion.

The Belgian army has been refusing to volunteers the privilege of choosing their regiments and this is supposed to confirm the report that the government intends by decree to modify the existing recruiting laws and call out all physically fit men between the ages of nineteen and twenty-five, married as well as single. No more passopt's for Holland are delivered to men in this category wishing to return to Belgium.

An Interesting Competition for Standard Readers

In the Saturday, May 8th, issue of The Standard, we will publish another sketch which we want every boy and girl under 14 years of age to try and color with water colors or chalks.

To the young artist who does it the best we will give a prize of a dollar.

It's a simple competition, no hard rules, no entrance fees, just cut the picture out, paint or color it the way you think best, save six coupons the same as the one shown on this page each morning from The Standard, fill them up, pin them to the painting and send them all addressed

THE STANDARD, ST. JOHN, N. B.

Mark your envelopes in the top left hand corner "Art Competition," then watch for your name appearing as the winner of the prize.

You must save the coupons from six consecutive issues of the paper. Start cutting these coupons now to be ready for next Saturday's picture.

Recent despatches from Rome seem to indicate that there is to be yet another battle front in the great world struggle, which front would stretch from a point where Austria, Italy and Switzerland meet to the Italian border on the North Adriatic, around the coast line of Trieste, Istria and Dalmatia to join the lines of Balkan soldiers at the rocks of Montenegro. In coast cities of Italy:

"Pola, the chief naval station and arsenal of the Dual Monarchy and one of the best protected ports in the world, may soon become known wherever war correspondence is read as the most vital strategic point on a new, wide sweeping battle front. For Pola is the Heligoland of the Austria's most powerful advanced base.

"Pola lies at the southern apex of the listran peninsula, about fifty-three miles south of Trieste. Its almost completely landlocked harbor is one of the finest of Europe, and upon its fine finest of Europe, and upon its first capture by the Romans in 178 B. C. Pola has been a war port since the place. It once was the most of the Roman world-empire spirits of the Roman world-empire of the Roman world-empire of the Roman world-empire of the Roman world-empire and whence they made their raids upon the rich commerce that flowed from every eastern Mediterran-ean port to Rome. The Romans destroyed the place. Under the Emperor Septims Severus, 193-211 A. D., it again became an important war harbor and its city grew to 50,000 inhabitants. The trade rivals, Venice and Genoa, fought each other for its possion, as it was a key to the freedom of the Adriatic. Destroyed by the Genoese in 1379, it continued under the sovereignty of Venice until 1737, when it fell to Austria upon the dismensement of the eventian State.

HAD DYSPEPSIA

Se Bad Could Not Take a Drink of Water Without Suffering.

Dyspepsia is one of the most difficult diseases of the stomach there is to cure. You eat too much. Drink too much use toom work overtime. You make the perform more than it should be called on to do. The natural result is that it is going to rebel against the amount of work put on it. It is only a matter of a short time before dyspepsia follows.

That old, forty year old remedy, Burdock Blood Bitters, will cure the dyspepsia and will cure it to stay cured as we can prove by the thousands of the standard of the standard properties. There are large naval and infantry barracks and several well equipped hospitals here. If Austria and Italy go to war, Pola may become the most interesting point throughout the basin of the Mediterranean."

GENERAL JOFFRE DELIEVES IN LUCK

Thinks Fate was strongly on his side in his famous March to Timbuctoo.

Hard-headed, unsentimental soldie hough he is, it is one of the curiou though he is, it is one of the curious traits in Joffre's character that he is a firm believer in luck, says a writer in the Strand Magazine. He will tell you that his star was in the ascendant on that memorable march to Timbucto in January, 1894, when he avenged the murder of General Bonnier and his men and achieved the distinction of being the first French army officer to reach Timbuctoo. It should be remembered at that time Timbuctoo was a sort of Lhassa time Timbuctoo was a sort of Lhass had set foot within its walls. Joffre himself has related in his story of the had set foot within its walls. Joffre himself has related in his story of the expedition how he set out from Segou on Christmas Day, 1893, to the conquest of Timbuctoo, then in the hands of the Tuaregs, the terrible "veiled men" of the Western Soudan, who had the worst reputation of any brigand race on the face of the earth. The expedition was divided into three parts. Colonel Bonnier went up the Niger by water, preceded by Lieutenant Bolteux in a gunboat, while Joffre commanded the land column, a small force of some thirty Europeans and three hundred natives, who took an arduous route along the Niger banks. Bonnier and Boiteux reached Timbuctoo and occupied the citadel. But, unfortunately, Bonnier himself, setting out a day or two afterward against the Tuaregs, was surprised by night and massacred with all his men. Meanwhile Joffre was pushing ahead with his dittle force, and although harried by the Tuaregs, who hoped to surprise him as they did Bonnier, they never caught him asleep. Through deadly swamps and waterless desert, under a blazing tropical sky which caused the death of many men and horses, they steadily pushed ahead, and Joffre relates how he not only took the precaution of making friends with the local chiefs but he brought them along with him whenever possible, even at the price of much regretted delay, due to having to "sit up all night" in friendly palaver.
