

Due Both to Nature and Human Skill

Man must improve upon Nature in the production of super-fine tea like Lanka. The finest grades of British grown tea from the hill gardens of Ceylon are blended with scientific skill to produce the exquisite Lanka flavor.

This flavor is unique, a revelation—you have never tasted such wonderful tea. The aroma is captivating, its flavor, sparkling rich color, proclaiming quality. You don't know how good tea can be until you have enjoyed Lanka.

Yet Lanka is a popular priced tea, costing but 75 cents a pound. This is possible because it is imported direct from the Island of Ceylon via Vancouver, Keystone Canadian port for the Orient, which saves import duty and freight charges.

Your grocer has this super-fine tea. Order a package of Lanka Tea today.

Lanka Tea is imported and packed by W.M. Braid & Company, Vancouver, Canada

I've Kept My Name Out of the Papers all Summer Which is More Than Some People are Able to do.

The fact is, folks, I've been so tremendously busy that I had not time even to think about newspaper advertising. It takes a lot of my time just to give SERVICE to my clients, for I am determined always to give the very closest attention and the very best service to every one who does business with me.

First of all YOUR business is MY business, whether you list a property with me to sell, or whether you wish to buy a property through me. Then, I have only one price for a property listed with me, whether the purchaser is rich or poor, whether he is buying a home for himself or making an investment, the price here is always the same to everybody. "The Square Deal," remember. Also, I am the sole and only person conducting this business and I give my personal attention to every transaction and every client gets the full benefit of my experience, knowledge and personality. Consider these points and you will come to me to sell or to buy real estate, either in the city or the country.

Here is a partial list of the splendid opportunities I offer this week. I have helped hundreds of families to solve the housing problem in the past few months; and I can help you.

I embrace this opportunity to wish all my patrons and friends the very merriest kind of Christmas and the most prosperous New Year ever.

The Kris Kringle Chariot

BOSSY-checked school-boy on his new red sled sped down the long snow-clad hill. A dozen gayly chattering girls tripped towards the lightly frozen pond with their skates. A farmer came into view with a wagon load of newly cut Christmas trees. Yuletide cheer was everywhere, but there was no responsive echo of its fervor in the hearts of John Lane and Martin Freer.

"I'm in accord with you completely," the letter was saying. "My son, Sidney, has the chance of his life to enter a law career in the city. Since he fell in love with your half niece and ward, Edna, he seems to have lost all ambition of making his way outside of winning her."

"A foolish fancy," declared John Lane. "Edna is too young to think of marrying."

"We are going to send Edna away to a private boarding school after the holidays," he continued, "and that will probably end the affair."

Meantime Edna Merrill pined in her prisonlike solitude and Sidney sought to devise a way to get word to her. At their last meeting he had said, "No matter what comes, they shall not part us."

"They are going to send both of us away, widely apart," mourned Edna. "Oh, don't let them do it!"

"I have given you my heart and my life," answered Edna. "I have given you my heart and my life, and I have given you my heart and my life."

"Then you shall hear from me when I have matured all my plans," promised Sidney.

There was a certain solace for Sidney in climbing the high garden wall at the rear of the Lane grounds and gazing up at the window of the room that held his heart's treasure. He had a note waiting, detailing his plans and hopes, and he had almost despaired of delivering it, when, the afternoon before Christmas, he observed that the window was open.

Sidney added a few lines to the note, gathered up a handful of snow, enclosed the note in the white sphere, aimed, let fly and it passed through the open window.

The note had suggested the elopement he and Edna had previously discussed. He had added a line, "I will be in the lane at eight o'clock. Don't fail me."

There was a light in that upper window, now closed, when Sidney returned, and the lamp was set in a peculiar way. Across the frosted inside of a pane two words had been scratched, reading: "At eight."

A few minutes later the light was extinguished and a speeding figure crossed the garden, unlocked a rear door in the wall and the lovers were united.

"Quick," spoke Sidney. "It is a question of getting to a friend of mine, a clergyman at Amherst."

He clasped Edna's arm and they hurried down the lane.

The lane the fugitives were now in was deep with snow. As they neared a large barn within which showed a light Sidney drew Edna through its open door.

"We must hide for a spell," he said, and as quite breathless, they entered the great rambling structure, they stared in amazement at a scene strange and striking.

In the center was what looked like an old circus chariot. There was gilt and holly and evergreen trimming in profusion. Four horses were attached and upon a sort of throne in the center was seated a gorgeously attired Santa Claus.

"We'll better start," spoke one of the men, "if we want to get to Amherst before everybody is asleep, and catching sight of a sign on the chariot Sidney was made aware of the fact that to advertise a new soap this modern publicity van was touring the district, giving away samples as holiday presents.

"Step into that low space at the back," he whispered to Edna. "We shall be safe there."

When the unique Santa Claus vehicle arrived at the edge of Amherst, the suffering lovers left it unnoticed. There was a hurried walk to the home of a clergyman.

The same telegram was sent by the happy bride and bridegroom to John Lane and Martin Freer. It read: "Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Freer wish their loving friends a Merry, Merry Christmas."

Canada, Russia and Siberia have the three great belts of virgin timber still left in the world. Canada's first plant for the smelting of tin by electric furnace has been put in operation at Brantford, Ont.

Mrs. Harry Buehaupt of 232 Tuerk Street is visiting friends in Detroit over Christmas and New Years.

Ex-Alderman Donald McCallum, of St. Thomas, died suddenly at his home. The milk from a single Roquefort sheep will in a year provide from thirty to forty pounds of cheese.

COUNT FIFTY! NO NEURALGIA PAIN

Don't suffer! Instant relief follows a rubbing with old "St. Jacobs Liniment."

Conquers pain—never fails.

Rub soothing, penetrating "St. Jacobs Liniment" right on the ache or pain, and out comes the neuralgia misery.

Here's a joyful experiment! Try it! Get a small trial bottle from your druggist; pour a little in your hand and rub it gently on the sore aching nerves, and before you realize it—in just a moment—all pain and neuralgia disappear. It's almost magical, but the joy is that the misery doesn't come back. No! The nerves are soothed and congestion is relieved and your neuralgia is overcome.

Stop suffering! It's needless—neuralgia and pain of all kinds, either in the face, head, limbs or any part of the body, is instantly skinned. "St. Jacobs Liniment" is perfectly harmless and doesn't burn or discolor the skin. In use for half a century.
