Little Autumn Bride Entertains Sextette

Six Girl Friends Meet for the First Time Since the End of the War.

The September bride was giving a tea to the five girls who had been her best friends for years. The six of them had been known as "The Sextette" and had been inseparable until the war.

from the war, and Dos had married from the war, and Dos nat married him as soon as he was discharged. Of-the six, Mary had suffered most heavily as her husband had been killed in action leaving her and her wee baby alone and with few funds.

wee baby alone and with few funds.
Dora had completed her training as a nurse and was doing splendid work in one of the big military hospitals. Alive was a "green sister" and was turning her knowledge of basketry to good account in the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment.
Kathleen, whose lover had gone overseas early in the war, had been the stay-at-home of the crowd.
Anne was a business girl, and came in the crieps autumn air.

Anne was a business girl, and came in, her cheeks glowing from her walk in the crisp autumn air.

"Oh, isn't this heavenly," she ejaculated as she sunk into a chair. "Dot, you ought to be so glad you have a home so we can all get together again."

"I am," said the September bride, with glowing face. "Not for that reason entirely though."

"What is doing up town?" asked one of the group. "I feel as if I am out of the world when I don't go up town once in a while."

"Well, the town is getting pretty busy," answered Anne. "You know the Victory Loan starts next week, and the hive is humming already."

"Anne ought to know a lot about it as she works in a broker's office, said Dot as she poured the tea into the pretty fragile cups.

"I am finding out a lot about it every day," replied the business girl. "You'd be surprise at how many reasons there are why this loan should be a smashing success,"

"I just know one personally," said the little bride. "It is needed to pay for bringing my boy home to me." Demobilization," stated Anne.

the little bride. "It is needed to pay for bringing my boy home to me."

"Demobilization," stated Anne. "Exactly. Everyone wanted their boys back as soon as the armistice was signed, and Canada did her best and got them across in marvellously quick time, considering the number there were. Now the expense of it all has to be met."

"I know that the hospitals have to be kept up for a long time yet," said the nursing sister. "The boys that have been wounded and broken in health need much care yet, and they are looking to Canada to give them back their health if possible. The doctors and nurses must be paid, and the hospital equipment maintained, and it all takes money. I should think the Victory Loan of 1919 would be needed for that."

"A second good reason," said Anne. "Obligations to soldiers in hospitals."

"For my part I feel that the boys who are getting better need a lot of attention," said the "green sister."

"If find in my work such a lot of them that cannot go back to the old jobs they had on account of a lost leg or arm, and they are worrying about what will happen to them when they get out of hospital."

"True, now you have hit a good reason," Anne remarked. "It is to belp these very boys that the loan must go through. Canada is undertaking to train every man that has been crippled or otherwise disabled so he cannot resume his pre-war occupation, so that he can earn his own living. And the department sees to it that he gets a position when his course is completed. We must lend our money to give these boys a chance."

"They lost their limbs for us," said the war widow softly.

"They lost their limbs for us," said the war widow softly.

"Mary, dear, you are one of the very best reasons why every cent of the loan must be raised," said Anne, giving a loving glance at the black-clad figure. "All the dependents of our glorious dead must be provided for. Think, girls, of all the wives and bables and mothers that are finding it hard now to make ends meet. We must think of them, and lend generously."

him enough money to buy and stock a farm. He will have twenty years to pay for it, and the rate of interest is low. He says there are 25,000 re-turned men who want to go on the land."

the time."

"Now you have touched a reason that I can talk about," said Anne, the business girl. "You see, girls, Candad aepends on selling the surplus products of the farm and the factories to allied countries, especially Great Britain. Well, unless Canada has enough money to give credits to these countries they won't buy from us at all. If England went elsewhere for her food stuffs and her manufactured materials, just think what it
