

of the Government has been deemed necessary. With regard to changes of minor importance, the Editor refers the reader to the pages of the COMPANION, with an honest conviction that, as he has faithfully and fairly recorded all matters and things coming within its scope, the book will continue to be received with the same approbation and encouragement which have been extended to it since its first publication, ten years ago.

Ottawa, January, 1872.

---