

Administration says

Not on Campus!

UNB students have been stripped of a chance to see LaBare Review on campus.

Originally scheduled to perform at the Little Rock, the performance was cancelled after complaints from a church group and a city councillor. Now the show will be given at Roxy's on the Exhibition Grounds.

Although Campus Entertainment could have made up to $10 000, the UNB Administration decided that there could be too much negative publicity from staging an act that has been opposed by a small minority in the city.

Marc Braithwaite, Programmer with Campus Entertainment, and Student Union President Jane Arnold approached SUB Director Kim Norris on Tuesday with the idea of contracting LaBare Review to perform in the cafeteria.

Braithwaite is upset with the Administration's decision. "We missed the motherlode," he commented, "With this

"We could have made up to $10 000".

After conferring with Associate VP (Admin) Eric Garland, it was decided that Campus Entertainment would be denied the use of the event, we could have made enough money so that at the end of the year, we might have been able to have an Extravaganza with a $1.00 admission."

But Braithwaite is not totally concerned with the financial aspect. He is also upset that the Administration is influencing what the students are allowed to see.

"Anyone can go to one of the theatres and see a movie that is much more pornographic," said Braithwaite.

The cost of free radio

"It's really discouraging. You put four years working for something you believe in, something you think other people support, and then you find out nobody gives a damn. . .nobody cares."

CHSR-FM Station Director Steve Staples was less than happy Wednesday night. Just past the halfway point in the station's annual fund-raising drive, the station had raised only $4300, far short of the goal of $15 000 for the nine-day event.

"It's pretty bad for morale at the station. People at CHSR worked hard to put together really good shows this week and then we sit around in the pledge room for hours, sometimes without a single call."

The fund-raiser is modelled after similar events at other campus/community radio stations around the contry. This year's drive will probably succeed in balancing the budget for the station, but a secondary goal of setting up a prize fund for UNB students will probably have to wait for another year.

"There's still hope," says Station Manager Jeff Whipple. We only need an extra $1500 to set aside for the prize fund. I still think we can do it.

"Maybe the goal of $15 000 was overly optimistic. After all, that's the same amount the campus/community station in Halifax raised last year, and they have potentially four times as many listeners. I'd be quite happy even if we make it to eight or nine thousand."

Not all the people at the station are attributing the paucity of pledges to lack of listeners.

"It could just be the time of year," says Funding Drive Manager Doug Varty. "It's really not that long since Christmas and a lot of people may be short on cash. But, then again, we're only asking for five or ten dollars."

As an added incentive to potential pledgers, Varty, a longtime volunteer at the station and a former Station Manager, has vowed he'll have his head shaved in the middle of Fredericton Mall if the station makes it past the eight thousand dollar mark.

"I'm not worried," says Varty. "If we hit eight thousand, it'd probably fall out anyway."
