Never mind any other dowry if you have industry and economy.

The day of judgment is always nearer the day of promise than it seems.

The rays of happiness, like those of light, are colorless when unbroken.

It is sad but true that we can silence our consciences easier than our desires.

A good constitution is like a savings-box, its value is not known until it is broken.

What a catalogue of social virtues a man requires to make him generally beloved!

What wits we should be if we only uttered the bright things we think of when the occasion has past.

It is man the conqueror, not time, who works so much destruction on the monuments and works of art.

Pleasure is a subject in which we are all interested. At twenty-five we kill pleasure, at thirty we enjoy it, at forty we husband it, at fifty we hunt after it, and alas! at sixty we regret it!

An exchange says that it is very poor practice, indeed, to compel cows to live upon what they cannot eat with a relish. The appetite should be kept keen by a frequent change of food, or by a mixed ration, such as the system requires.

It is a very high mind to which gratitude is not a painful sensation. If you wish to please, you will find it wiser to receive, solicit even, favors, than accord them; for the vanity of the obligator is always flattered, that of the obligee rarely.

It is especially important to breed from first-class stock, since the bull gives character to the progeny more than does the cow. The product of an inferior cow is better from a first-class bull than that of an inferior bull out of a first-class cow.

I will govern my life and thoughts as if the whole world were to see the one and to read the other; for what does it signify to make anything a secret to my neighbour when to God (who is the searcher of our hearts) all our privacies are open?—Seneca.
