PROGRESS OF THE WAR

[October 26 to November 1]

THE week under review was marked by great activity on nearly all fronts the fortunes of war fluctuating from one side to the other, the net result apparen ly being to the advantage of neither. In the Western campaign the French and British made further advances on the Somme front. In the Herdun sector the French held all the ground taken in the preceding week, and made further gains in the direction of Fort Vanx. There was considerable activity in Flanders, where the Belgians and British made some slight gains of trenches. At other points, notably near Rheims, artillery duels were in progress, but without marked advantage to either side.

In the Eastern campaign the Russians made some gains in Volhynia west of Lutsk: but in Galicia, in the Carpathians, and in the Transylvanian Alps, the Russians and Rumanians barely held their
