Lord of the Manor of Ortford Seizes Astonished English "Vassal's" Best Horse as Heriot-Action Perfectly Legal - Recent Insistance Upon Rights Shows Need of Clean Sweep of Survivals of Ancient Land System.

The need of some act which will The need of some act which wan make a clean sweep of the preposterous relics of the feudal system of land tenure which still survive in many parts of England, has been strikingly shown by a case which has just come to light near Sevenoaks in Kent. There to light near Sevenoaks in Kent. There resides Earl Amherst, who, among his other hereditary claims to distinction, boasts that of being lord of the manor of Ortford. Within the borders of the domain thus designated Herbert Couldrey took up his abode some months ago, totally unaware that thereby he incurred any obligations as a vassal of the lord of the manor.

uty stewards called upon Mr. Couldroy, and, seeing a horse and trap standing outside the house, asked Mr. Couldrey if the horse was his. On being answered in the affirmative, the deputy steward cut some hairs from the horse's mane, and after depositing them in his pocket, placed a hand on the horse's shoulder, accompanying the action with the words, "This horse is now the property of Lord Amherst."

Cornwall, June 2.—James Leitch, K. C., of Cornwall, last night received notice of his appointment as chairman of the Railway and Municipal Board for Ontario at a selection. of the Railway and Municipal Board for Ontario, at a salary of $6,000 a year. This is the new board brought into existence by an act of the late session of the Ontario Government.

Mr. Leitch was called to the bar in the Easter term, 1876, and at once commenced practice in Cornwall. He was appointed a Queen's Counsel by the Earl of Derby in 1889.

wish to push his rights to their legal limits and would therefore permit Mr. Couldrey to redeem the horse. The price of the redemption was subse-quently fixed at $57.50—about one-third of its real value—which shows that Earl Amherst is a much more liberal man than his feudal ancestors, who were wont to exact everything they could claim from their vassals.

As mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucus surfaces. Such articles should never by used except on prescriptions from Finding there was no other method by which he could recover the horse, Mr. Couldrey bought it back at the price stipulated. Then, in order to call public attention to the case, he brought suit against the earl for the keep of the horse during the two weeks that the settlement of the matter was pending for in accordance with the abound used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten-fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. How frequently does a head line similar to the above greet us in the newspapers. The rush, push and strenuousness of the American people has a strong tendency to lead up to valvular and other affections of the heart, attended by irregular action, palpitation, dizziness, smothered sensations and other distressing symptoms.

arfections of the heart, attended by Ingent seeing a horse and trap standing outside the house, asked Mr. Couldrey if the horse was his. On being answered in the affirmative, the deputy steward cut some hairs from the horse's mane, and after depositing them in his pocket, placed a hand on the horse's shoulder, accompanying the action with the words, "This horse is now the property of Lord Amherst."

Like Comic Opera, But Legal.

In the twentieth century this appears more like a bit of fooling from a comic opera than a valid process, but, thanks to the medieval laws that still remain unrepealed, the deputy steward's fantastic performance actually made Earl Amherst the owner of Mr. Couldrey's steed. However, the deputy steward only took away the hairs that he had cut from the mane, the major portion of his lordship's newly appropriate property, which required stabling and general, being a generous man, did not wish to push his rights to their legal limits and would therefore permit Mr. Couldrey to redeem the horse. THE DIVING BELL.

How the First One Made by Dr. Hal-ley Was Operated. It was nearly 200 years ago that Edmund Halley constructed what is of-ten referred to as the first diving bell, although the apparatus must have been much like that which was previously exhibited in the presence of Charles V., says the Technical World Maga-

The principle of the diving bell is simple. An inverted jar sunk in the water retains air at its top, and if there is enough air men may live and breathe and work there and keep dry. Dr. Halley's diving bell was a large wooden chamber open at the bottom and loaded there with lead to prevent it from turning in the water. Pieces of glass set in the roof furnished light. Air was supplied by an ingenious method, for leaded casks full of air were sent down, bung downward. Tipping the barrel, water would rush into it and drive out the air to the man in

At the depth of thirty-three feet the air is compressed to half its former bulk, and the bell is therefore depth half filled with water, and as the depth increases so do the compression and the pressure.

The Turkish Janizaries. The Turkish janizaries (yeni askari, new soldier) were originally Christian captives, who in the middle of the fourteenth century were trained to be the bodyguard of Sultan Amurath I. Originally they numbered 1,000, but after 300 years they had increased a hundredfold, and under Solyman the Magnificent they formed a force highly disciplined and noted for the wild impetuosity of their attack. The history of these janizaries abounds in con-spiracies and atrocities of every kind, so that at last they became more dangerous to the sultan than his foreign enemies. The lowest officers of this force were the cooks, who were held in the greatest esteem. They wore wooden spoons in their turbans and on great occasions mustered round their kettles, which they turned upside down as a token of revolt. To lose one of these kettles in battle was as much of a disgrace as the loss of a regiment's colors has been in later times.

Could Not Trust Him. After a wordy argument in which neither scored two Irishmen decided to fight it out. It was agreed, says the Washington Post, that when either said "I've enough" the fight should cease. After they had been at it about cease. After they had been at about ten minutes one of them fell and imme-diately yelled: "Enough! I've enough!" But his opponent kept on pounding him until a man who was watching them said:

"Why don't you let him up? He says he's got enough."
"I know he says so," said the victor between punches, "but he's such a liar you can't believe a word he says!"

The following is an account of the bidding ceremony, an old custom which is said to be celebrated even to this day in rural parts of Wales: The bidder goes from house to house with a long pole and ribbons flying at the end of it, and standing in the middle floor in each house he repeats a long lesson with great formality. He mentions the day of the wedding, the place, the prepara-tions made, etc. The following is a specimen: "The intention of the bidder is this: With kindness and amity, with decency and liberality for - and he invites you to come with your good will on the plate.
