Say "No, I cannot Afford It"

Mr. Theo. H. Price of New York is responsible for the following very timely article, which is well worth reading:

The time has come when we must be willing to be eccentric in our economy. We must be willing to wear old clothes and make them over. To ignore the periodicity of the seasons insofar as our head gear is concerned. To clean our own shoes instead of paying five or ten cents for a shoe to be made for us by some foreigner. To patronize low priced shops instead of the fashionable establishments whose extravagant rents we pay in the prices demanded for the distinction of dealing with them. To tell the shopkeeper that he is charging too much and leave his wares unsold. To carry our own parcels home and demand a reduction for doing so. To save strings and wrapping paper and make kindling wood out of the boxes instead of throwing them out to be taken away by the garbage man. To use less light and less fuel. To walk when we do not really need to pay a nickel for a ride. To teach our children that they can be happier with a few things than with many.

Those of us who are old enough to have been children 30 years ago are utterly appalled when we consider how many things that were then a thought of now have become "unnecessary necessities." To go to the theatre then was an event. Now it is a weekly if not almost a nightly habit. To dine away from home was then almost unheard of. Now hundreds of thousands of dollars are spent each evening in this country for dinners in restaurants.

The phrase "week-end" had not then been invented and most people spent their Sundays quietly and restfully at home. Now rarely everyone has to go on what Samanthy called a "pleasure excursion" that involves no small expenditure. Their children were brought up to do their share of the household work and profited by the education that they acquired in doing it. Now they must be "provided with amusement." Their

Then we were taught to "turn down the gas" when we left the room. Now the electric lights are allowed to burn. Then the household who kept a carriage and horses was unusual. Now we shamefully apologize if we do not own a "motor." Then we had in plain rings and used the same napkin for at least three meals. Now we must have fresh ones every time we sit down to the table. Children then used slates and pencils which cost a few cents and lasted months. Now they must have paper pads for each of which we pay nearly the price of a slate. If we were any happier or wealthier for all that we think we must have today there might be some justification for the enormous increase in expenditure that is involved, but are we?

There is no statistical record of happiness by which comparison can be made, but if there were it is very doubtful whether the present would show any improvement over the past, and the increase in the number of divorces suggests that life may not perhaps be as blissful as it was fifty years ago.

As to health, it is true that our longevity is greater and our mortality less than it was in the past, but the improvement in this respect is due to the advance of medical science and not to our increased expenditures and self-indulgences. Perhaps we shall be still better off physically if we return to the habits of our fathers insofar as purchasable pleasure and self-satisfaction is concerned.

One thing is however certain. All the laws the government can pass and everything toward reducing prices will avail but little unless we live up to the spirit by which they are inspired and have the moral courage to say, "NO, I CANNOT AFFORD IT."

Potato Chop.

Chop fine the whites of four hard boiled eggs and add to two coffee cups of cold boiled potatoes chopped rather fine. When well tossed together add a cupful of broken English walnuts or hickory nuts and the smallest sized bottle of stuffed olives cut in bits.

Season all to taste with onion juice (obtained by rubbing the onion over a grater), salt and pepper. Melt half a coffee cup of butter, add to it the juice of half a lemon and mix thoroughly with the potato mixture. Arrange on a platter and grate over the top the four egg yolks, arranging as a narrow green border around the edge about three tablespoonsful of chopped parsley.

Mabel (studying her lesson)—Papa, what is the definition of "volubility"?
Mabel's father—My child, volubility is a distinguishing feature of your mother when on account of urgent business affairs I don't happen to reach home until after 2 o'clock in the morning.

Every Woman's Right.

To every woman belongs the right to enjoy a healthy, active, happy life. To nine out of every ten suffer years of agony, usually from some form of bloodlessness. That is why one sees every side, pale, thin cheeks, dull eyes and drooping features—sure signs of headaches, weak backs, aching limbs and uncertain health. All such suffering women should win the right to be well by refreshing weary bodies with the new, rich, pure, and completely transformational Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People.

The new, rich red blood is applied in abundance by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills which reaches every organ and every nerve in the body.

Through the use of these pills thousands of women have found a prompt cure when suffering from anemia, indigestion, heart palpitation, rheumatism, general weakness and those ailments from which women alone suffer. There is no part of this broad Dominion in which you will not find some former sufferer who has regained health and strength through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and this is the reason why these pills have been a favorite household remedy for more than a generation. If you are ailing and will give the pills a fair trial you will find renewed health and happiness in their use.

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any medicine dealer, or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Uses For Blackberries.

No fruit is more delicious in jam, jelly or cordial than the blackberry, for which several excellent recipes are given here.

Blackberry Jam.—Prepare the fruit and allow three quarters of a pound of sugar for each pound of fruit. Crush the fruit, put it over a moderate fire and let boil for twenty minutes; then add the sugar which has been heated in the oven, and boil, skimming frequently until a little amount of jelly on a cold saucer. Store as for jelly.

Blackberry jelly.—Heat the berries until softened and the juice flows freely. Let drain. Heat the juice quickly to the boiling point, let boil for twenty minutes, add three fourths the quantity of heated sugar and let cook for only a couple of minutes, stirring hard. Skim and turn into glass. Second and third extractions may be made from the pulp for the remaining juice may be pressed hard from the bag. Use about one-half of a cupful of sugar to each cupful of liquid secured by extractions two and three.

Boil together all extractions after the first and when well reduced add three quarters of a cupful of heated sugar for each cupful of juice and let boil to the jelling stage.

The frankest excuse given by a slacker in this war was given by a Philadelphia youth who, the other day, made a personal visit to the White House at Washington, and lodged a plea for exemption on the ground that he was "too big a coward to fight."

"What did you get out of that that case?" asked the first lawyer.
"A hundred and fifty thousand dollars," replied the second lawyer.
"Good round sum, eh?"
"Yes, but I thought the old man left more than that."

HUSBAND OBJECTS TO OPERATION

Wife Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Des Moines, Iowa.—"Four years ago I was very sick and my life was nearly spent. The doctor stated that I would never get well without an operation and that without it I would not live one year. My husband objected to any operation and got me some of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it and commenced to get better and am now well, am stout and able to do my own housework. I can recommend the Vegetable Compound to any woman who is sick and run down as a wonderful strength and health restorer. My husband says I would have been in my grave as this if it had not been for your Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. BLANCHÉ JEFFERSON, 708 Lyon St., Des Moines, Iowa.

Before submitting to a surgical operation it is wise to try to build up the female system and cure its derangements with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; it has saved many women from surgical operations.

Write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for advice. It will be confidential.

Warns Germany of Britain's Power.

Copies of the Rheinische Westfalische Zeitung recently received in London contain a series of articles on the war situation, in which the readers of this organ of the Krupps and leading mouthpiece of the German munition makers are warned not to be too optimistic regarding the future, and great stress is laid upon the strength of the British Empire and its world wide dominions. The writer takes Dr. Von Rehm's hollow to his frequent references to the map in talking about the present situation of the belligerents. The map may show some things favorable to Germany, but it shows other things as well, which make an exceedingly gloomy impression. The Essen paper continues:

"England, which at the beginning of the war was so foolishly and dangerously underestimated, has, during the struggle, attained military and political strength which has almost reduced to silence those in the summer of 1914. England the falling Carthage, the land without conscription, has shown herself as a nation which still rules the world, and to drive back which in order that we may live, still requires all our strength."

"In contemplation of the terrible battles in Europe, and in the examination of our European map, we have forgotten the map of the world, and it is high time that we look at that. While in our immediate neighborhood she remains on the defensive she is yet strong enough in other parts of the world to develop a remarkable offensive, a simple result of the policy of the last forty years."

Make an End of War.

The reason why we do not wish peace at the present time is because we wish a lasting peace. The great reason we have for wishing the war to go on for a while longer is that we wish to make an end of war.

Such statements sound paradoxical, but they are merely the simplest common sense. Peace now would lead to a diplomacy never brought about might be secured by a few years of conflict. The result would be a continuance of the war machine of Germany, made vastier then before. And in other nations it would mean war preparations on a scale to which the world has not in the past been accustomed. We should all be impoverished by the annual expense, as we viewed each other with suspicion and got ready for the conflict which was certain to come.

The only way to make an approximate end of war is to prove beyond dispute that war is unprofitable, and that those who wage it for the sake of selfish or national advantage are bound to come to disaster. If this is not done, then treaty breaking, unwarranted invasions, righteousness and ruthlessness, and all the other abominations construction by the German war machine will have the right of way, and we shall go into a future more hideous than the past has been.

It is for this general reason that Lloyd-George will not at present listen to proposals of peace. If fighting was stopped now, Germany would get ready for the next time. And, as he says, "There must be no next time." Hearts everywhere are naturally longing for peace, and are open to the insidious German suggestions. But this is the very time when, weary as the world may be of fighting, it should steel its heart to all suggestion of a stop. The war must be fought out. The Prussian must be brought to his knees. Germany must be delivered of the seven devils which have possessed her. When that comes to pass, we can sit down to games and calm mak-arrangements for a future which shall be marked by better things than a mad military and naval race for first place.—G. O. CATER, Times.

Germany Weakening.
British and United States correspondents at the front agree that indications of Germany's weakening powers and resources are multiplying. The German rank and file is deteriorating in quality. The armies are no longer composed of the men of the prime of early manhood who marched so bravely into Belgium and poured into Northern France. The vacant places have been filled by men approaching middle age and by immature youths of 18 and even 17, thrown into the battle line after a few weeks of military training. Even the crack regiments that were believed to be invincible have not the vigor and confidence that marked their earlier achievements on the fields of France and Flanders.

That Germany is suffering from a still greater inferiority in guns and munitions is another phase of the war situation that is chronicled by press correspondents. Orders have been found in the gun emplacements and on the persons of the killed, wounded and prisoners exhorting officers and men not to employ their heavy cannon without reason and to husband both gun and rifle ammunition. Stewart Lyon, the very capable press correspondent with the Canadian forces in the field, notes that many guns have been withdrawn from the German forward area to escape capture. Loss of guns, says this competent observer, appears to be more important in the eyes of the German commanders than the loss of lives. Wm. Philip Simms notes further that the Germans have withdrawn their airplanes from daylight battles and are using them in night attacks on points behind the British fighting lines. Tactical changes of this nature, amounting to a confession of actual and relative inferiority, are not made except under the pressure of imperative necessity. And how otherwise can such a movement be explained as the marching of a strong division of the Prussian Guard for nearly three miles along a road exposed to both the direct and indirect fire of British guns. Writing in the London Mail, Beach Thomas calls the march an "efficient but suicidal. The whole body of several thousand men was shot down—they died and did not kill an advance of this nature can only be explained as an act of desperation, not even a forlorn hope.

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

Barbers Itch Eczema

BARBERS' Itch is in reality a form of eczema. The delicate skin becomes irritated from shaving, a little infection gets in, and soon burning, stinging eczema is set up.

Fortunately, there is cure for Barbers' Itch and Eczema in the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and once you have made the acquaintance of this soothing, healing ointment, you will always keep it on hand to apply after shaving. Not every time, but whenever there is roughness or irritation of the skin.

Mr. Chas. A. Duxbury, Masford, Ont., states:—"While out in the Northwest I caught barbers' Itch and eczema who has had it will admit that it is not at all pleasant. It began on my neck, below the chin, and spread until I became almost blind. It itched so bad that I had to scratch it, and that only made it worse."

My friend or mine told me to use Dr. Chase's Ointment and I did so. The application of this ointment gave prompt relief to the itching, and it was not many weeks until I was entirely free of this annoying ailment."

Some of the ingredients of Dr. Chase's Ointment are very expensive, and for this reason imitations and substitutes are offered because they afford greater profits to the dealer. They will only disappoint you. The genuine Dr. A. W. Chase's Ointment will positively cure.
