For Toilet Use.

Ayer's Hair Vigor keeps the hair soft and pliant, imparts to it the lustre and freshness of youth, causes it to grow luxuriantly, eradicates Dandruff, cures all scalp diseases, and is the most cleanly of all hair preparations.

AYER'S Hair Vigor has given me perfect satisfaction. I was nearly bald for six years, during which time I used many hair preparations, but without success. Indeed, what a little hair I had was growing thinner, until I tried Ayer's Hair Vigor. I used two bottles of the Vigor, and my head is now well covered with a new growth of hair.—Judson B. Chapel, Peabody, Mass.

HAIR that has become weak, gray, and faded, may have new life and color restored to it by the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor. My hair was thinning, faded, and dry, and fell out in large quantities. Ayer's Hair Vigor stopped the falling, and restored my hair to its original color. As a dressing for the hair, this preparation has no equal.—Mary N. Hammond, Stillwater, Minn.

VIGOR, appearance of the hair, may be preserved for an indefinite period by the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor. I have used the scalp caused my hair to become harsh and dry, and to fall out freely. Nothing I tried seemed to do any good until I commenced using Ayer's Hair Vigor. Three bottles of this preparation restored my hair to a healthy condition, and it is now soft and pliant. My scalp is cured, and it is also free from dandruff.—Mrs. E. E. Foss, Milwaukee, Wis.

Ayer's Hair Vigor,
Sold by Druggists and Perfumers.

PERFECT SAFETY, prompt action, and wonderful curative properties, easily place Ayer's Pills at the head of the list of popular remedies for Stomach and Nervous Headaches, Constipation, and all ailments originating in a disordered liver.

MARY'S QUINCES.

"So you won't give us nothin' for the subscription?" said Mrs. Biggard, folding her mittens hands sanctimoniously upon her lap. "Remember, Mary Hay, 'he who giveth to the poor lendeth to the Lord.'"

"Yes, I know, Mrs. Biggard," said Mary Hay, with the color coming and going on her cheek, while a sense of the ridiculous strove within her, against a meek consciousness of the solemnity of the words just quoted; "but the farm hasn't done as well this year as we expected it to do, and until all the outstanding debts are paid I think it would be scarcely just to indulge myself in the luxury of subscribing to the 'Fund for the Evangelizing of the Eboe Indians.'"

Mrs. Biggard clasped the little, red morocco subscription-book with a clicking sound.

"Humph!" said she, "Why don't you say at once that you'd rather spend your money in navy-blue silk gowns and flashy bonnets?"

Mary reddened to the roots of her hair.

"Perhaps you are not aware, Mrs. Biggard," said she, "that the navy-blue dress was mother's old one, dyed over at home, and that the bonnet was a present from my aunt in Springfield."

"All very well to talk," sputtered Mrs. Biggard, shaking out her multitudinous flounces. "But I know that Mr. Midway will be powerfully disappointed. He expects something besides empty talk from the ladies of the flock."

Once more the rosate color suffused Mary's cheek.

"My duty is my duty," said she, "and I cannot swerve from it to please any one—not even Mr. Midway."

And the amiable Mrs. Biggard went straight to the rectory and told Mr. Midway that Mary Hay said she wasn't going to subscribe to the fund, to please Mr. Midway nor any one else.

The rector listened in silence, but he was conscious of a pang of inward annoyance.

He had scarcely expected so curt a message from Mary Hay, in whose dove-like blue eyes he had so often read the light of sympathy, whose down-cast head reminded him of the beautiful "Mater Dolorosa."

"So different from my Ruey, now, ain't she?" said Mrs. Biggard. "Why Ruey she's fairly walked through the soles of a pair of boots-a-sollicita subscriptions for the fund. There never was nobody so devout as she is. And she wants to know—my Ruey does—whether she and Almira shan't come over to the rectory an' put up the parlor curtains for you this afternoon."

"Thank you!" said Mr. Midway, with something of an embarrassed air; "but I dare say that Bridget will do very well. I wouldn't trouble Miss Zeruiah, and—"

"Oh, it won't be no trouble at all!" said Mrs. Biggard.

And off she trudged to give the needful directions to Zeruiah and Almira, her two lean, middle-aged daughters.

"I do feel such a motherly sympathy for a bachelorette clergyman!" said she, "There ain't no more helpless creature on the face of the earth."

While Mary Hay, busy at her work in the farm-house kitchen, was puzzling her brains to think up some possible or impossible plan to get a little money to help kind Mr. Midway's plan along.

"I wish I could spare something," she said, "if it was only a dollar!"

"I wish you could, my dear!" said gentle Mrs. Hay, who had overheard the eager words.

"Mother," cried Mary, "there are the quinces—the quinces down by the railroad! Why couldn't I sell them at the store? The trees hang full this year, and the fruit is beautifully perfect!"

"I never thought of that," said Mrs. Hay. "We'll go to-morrow and gather them, Mary—you and I."

Mary went singing about her work that afternoon. Her heart was light as any father's. Why, had she not remembered the quince-tree before? Quinces were rare and high-priced this season, and she thought she was certain of at least five dollars for the crop.

But the next day, when she and her mother—Mrs. Hay carrying the basket and Mary merrily trundling the barrow along before her—went down to the orchard, whose slopes extended to the glittering steel lines of the railway, lo and behold! the trees were utterly stripped of their golden load.

Mary burst into tears. She sat down on the edge of the wheelbarrow and hid her head in her mother's apron like a child.

"Oh, mother, who has done this?" she cried. "Who can have been so wicked—so cruel?"

"It's the boys, I'm afraid," said Mrs. Hay. "Don't fret, daughter—don't! It's done, and it can't be helped."

"The boys never
