BULLS AND BEARS

Fighting Their Battles in Court—'Sports' Gain Temporary Victory.

Chicago, July 31.—The ban of the courts has been placed on the corner of July oats. On application of Waite, Thornburn & Co., one of the firms heavily short in the July option, a temporary restraining order was granted by Judge Chitmans yesterday in the Superior Court, prohibiting James A. Patten and associates from continuing a corner in new July oats and from bidding up the price of the cereal or calling for further margins.

This is the first time in the history of the Chicago Board of Trade that dealers who are short have resorted to the courts to assist them in a dilemma like the present, and the injunction came as a decided surprise, although drastic measures had been threatened to prevent heavy losses.

The injunction runs against Carrington, Patten & Co., Patten Bros. & Bartlett, Frazier & Co. Default on $300,000 bushels of short new July oats, lawsuits and action by the Board of Trade, are seemingly the inevitable results of the granting of the restraining order.

Cornered and unable to secure new July oats where to meet their contracts, the little husband and wife appear to have practically thrown up their hands. "We have nothing left to do but to default," said one of the unfortunate. Those in control of the corner wait and see what will come of the price would go up into the clouds. A dollar a bushel could easily be exacted, as the receipts of standard new oats will not nearly fill our contracts.

A PANTHER HUNT IN BRONXVILLE

New York Nimrods Enjoy an Unusual Experience.

CAPTURED FUGITIVE FROM ZOO

The Little Beast Has Been Named "Tracy"—It Was Proposed to Send for President Roosevelt.

New York, July 30.—The young panther which escaped on Sunday from Bronx Park, by eating the elms off his cage, and which has been dubbed "Tracy," after the Washington outlaw, has been captured in Bronxville by a crowd of farmers living in that neighborhood and returned to his cage.

John Stears, who lives about one mile east of the Zoological Gardens, caught sight of "Tracy" near his barn. He gave the alarm and about 20 persons responded, armed with all sorts of weapons. The panther was overtaken, but only two of the pursuers stood their ground. They succeeded in thrusting a large animal and carried it back to the park. The hunt for Tracy began in earnest Monday. Almost at break of day scouts came in with the report that Carl Tietz, a Bronxville lad, had encountered the mountain lion near the Blue Bridge. Neither lingered. Tracy started away with long easy leaps and seemed to be heading for Fiskkill. Carl did not stop running until he reached the Bronx police station. There Sergeant Hogue, a test of his trustiest braves to strike the trail where Tietz had left it.

"The Bronx expects every man to do his duty," said Hogue. The policeman looked well to their weapons and sallied forth, shoulder to shoulder, like men enlisted in a forlorn hope. Yet while yet the young Mounted Policeman Murphy and Bicycle Policeman John G. Krueger, known on the force as "Oom Paul," struck the critic's trail not far from the Blue Bridge. The hunt led them toward a thicket beside the road, and "Oom Paul" was about to assume the role of dismounted cavalry when Murphy's horse snorted and reared. He had almost stepped on the puma. Krueger says, as the animal lay crouching under a bush, dreaming of his old Chihuahua home.

"By all the powers," said Murphy afterwards, "the critter may be as harmless as a dove, but I don't like the looks of him when he humps his back and climbs through the air like a skyrocket, with his tail a-bristling as big as a mop."

ARMED WITH A SCYTHE.

Reports of this encounter hastened preparations for the hunt that was being organized about the administration building of the zoological gardens. When it was armed and equipped this formidable posse consisted of a dozen men, under the leadership of Mr. Dittmars, curator of the park. Muncy, the monkey keeper, carried a large animal net, while Sam Webb, a park employee, sallied forth armed with a grass hook.

Chief Forester and Superintendent of Construction Herman W. Merkle, mounted in a wagon, was a scout of cross between a Kentucky brake and an Irish jaunting car, mustered the force of beaters, some of whom carried butterfly nets, while others bore clubs and staves, and one flourished a scythe, which he explained was not to cut the puma's legs off, but to thin out the thickets that might beset the hunt.

By far the most picturesque figure in the group was Joseph Bell, a keeper who was once a western cowpuncher, and is a graduate of Buffalo Bill's Wild West show. Bell swung on his left arm a coiled lariat. When the posse reached the thicket of last, soiling a mountain lion cub, Bell gave an impromptu display of his skill. He deftly caught Chief Forester Merkle's horse about the neck at a distance of 15 paces and the animal, losing the steed protested and threatened to kick the dashboard out of the jaunting car. Then the cowboy lassoed a kitten that lay dozing in the shadow of the reptile house and Bell held a post of honor in the hunt.

Muncy and Webb, who had been sent out early on scout duty, came in breathless after a time. Each had sighted the puma, but Webb had spotted him at 10 o'clock, moving in good order across Pelham avenue, near the northwestern entrance to the park. Webb had made a jab at the puma with his lasso, but Tracy had leaped nimbly and whisked away laughing.

Muncy, the monkey keeper, had encountered the Mexican, an hour and a half later. During the interval his lionship had dotted the landscape, rearing the park and then skirting the Bronx Lake to the southward, and had appeared at a little pond known as the West Farm road, where the pond where the Boston road crosses Bronx Lake.

DOGS IN THE HUNT.

Hudzie, the keeper, about noon caught a fleeting glimpse of the runaway back of the nursery in the botanical garden, in the northern end of the park, and a good two miles from where Muncy had seen him.

Before the posse moved in force toward the nursery, soon after noon, it received a strong reinforcement. John Ross, chief carpenter of the garden, had come from his home in Williamsbridge with his three faithful coon dogs, Sport, Joke and Two Spot.

"Once we get Tracy treed," said Ross, "we've got him sure," and he's bound to tire of this outer racket and picnic diet before long."

Sport, though the fattest of the three coon dogs, did most of the work, while Two Spot, so named from the white markings over his eyes, showed some disposition to shirk. After the beaters had beaten down the landscape for half a mile, Sport yelped delightedly. He seemed to recognize the scent, which he had reached that stage when he was bloated and in convulsions.

In fact he was so low that the doctors told Mrs. Kent one evening that he might not live at all.

He has made an avowal statement of the facts of the case which has been published in the local papers here.

HAYTI IN AN UPROAR

An Unorganized Mob Threatens the Capital and Foreign Consuls.

Washington, July 30.—The following cablegram was received at the navy department from Commander McCrea, of the Machias, which has arrived at Cape Haytien: "Affairs are very disturbed at Cape Haytien. Unorganized mob in the city. Foreign consuls have been threatened. Will give protection on board. I will prevent bombardment without due notice."

A Cape Haytien dispatch says: Gen. Morde, who went out to give battle to Gen. Salnave, was defeated and his army retreated in panic to Cape Haytien. The volunteers have abandoned their posts.

Confidence has been restored among the foreign residents by the energetic measures of Commander McCrea.

ASSASSINS MUST DIE

Marquis de Mores' Murderers Convicted by Widow's Efforts.

Tunis, July 31.—The trial of the assassins of the Marquis de Mores, at Susa, near here, resulted yesterday in the condemning to death of El Ikher and the sentencing to a result of the Marquis de Mores' murder.

The Marquis de Mores was killed near Gabes, in June, 1896, by a number of assassins. The Marquis de Mores was the only one of his assassins captured. His widow, who was Marie von Hoffman, daughter of a von Hoffman, offered a reward of 5,000 francs for the arrest of the principal assassin.

Seventeen others accused of the assassination of the Marquis de Mores were sentenced in default, six to be put to death and eleven to hard labor.

THIEF WITHOUT FEET

Both Legs Off Above the Knees—Charged With Stealing Shoes.

Beaver Falls, July 31.—John Parsons, alias "Cockey," a cripple, whose legs are off above the knees, was arrested by Chief of Police Strayer last night charged with burglarizing the store of John J. Strayer, at Fallston, and the shoe store of Valentine Arnold, at this place, and also with the theft of a horse and buggy from the stable of Frank Myers, here, and a horse from Robert Warren's stable, six miles north of town.

Chief Strayer believes the cripple is the leader of an organized gang of thieves that has been devastating the Beaver Valley. In each case the stolen goods from the stores were carried away with the aid of stolen horses. Parsons walks on the stumps of his legs, with the aid of short crutches, and is agile as a cat.

$6,000,000 RICHER

Demand for Pulp Wood Increases Value of Maine's Wild Lands.

Bangor, Me., July 31.—The state assessors of Maine have decided to increase the valuation of the wild lands by $6,000,000, or about 33 per cent. in connection with this Chairman Potte says: "There has been a great deal of agitation over this wild land question. We find that the lands have doubled in value within a short time, largely on account of the increased demand for pulp wood through the timber country. The demand for logs to supply pulp mills, these properties have suddenly become a source of great profit to their owners."

"This being the case, it is only fair that they should pay their proportion of the taxes," he said. "The wild lands have been fairly and reasonably valued, realizing that their holdings have gained greatly in value, and being willing to have their valuation increased one-third."

A FOOL AND HIS MONEY

Pittsburgh Drops $2,000 Easily in a Trip to Coney Island, N. Y.

New York, July 31.—George M. Tarr, apparently a well-to-do resident of Pittsburgh, appeared at the Coney Island station house last night in a decidedly disheveled condition and complained of losing $2,000 in banknotes. He said he had been followed by a man who had stolen the money from him. He had been followed by a man who had stolen the money from him. He had been followed by a man who had stolen the money from him.

After a few drinks the Pittsburgher evidently threw off all reserve and showed the women the huge bundle of greenbacks. They became even more gracious and volunteered to show their prosperous acquaintance where the best table in the hotel was. The dining room could be secured. As the meal proceeded the Pittsburgher removed his coat so as to more fully enjoy the ocean breeze. Before the coffee was reached the women excused themselves. Half an hour later Tarr missed his money and reported to the police.

An Ottawa Man Has Emphasized His Good Opinion of Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Ottawa, Ont., July 28.—(Special.)—Mr. George H. Kent, of 309 Glenora street, this city, had Bright's Disease some eight or nine years ago. He had been in bed for months, gradually getting worse and physicians could do nothing for him. His case had reached that stage when he was bloated and in convulsions.

In fact he was so low that the doctors told Mrs. Kent one evening that he might not live at all.

He has made an avowal statement of the facts of the case which has been published in the local papers here.

TERRIFIC COMBAT.

Paris witnessed one of the most terrific combats of wild beasts that has occurred outside of the jungle during a recent celebration of the Fall of the Bastille.

A lion tamer, Adrien Person, for the 14th of July, installed his menagerie at the place of the Temple, in Paris. A tamer, Valtot, was showing off several tamed lions in the central cage. A little further in another cage were three lionesses and the lion Menelik, a superb beast that has never been tamed. These animals were very much agitated. In the adjoining cage was a panther alone.

The lionesses succeeded in opening with their claws the wall separating the cages, and suddenly, amid the most fearful roars, Menelik and the three lionesses threw themselves on the panther. Person tried in vain to separate the furious animals. At length, by pricking them through the bars, the tamer, with the assistance of the whole personnel of the menagerie, succeeded in driving the infuriated beasts back into their cage, but not before the panther was almost torn to pieces.
