The story is very little different from the average melodrama. The passions of jediously, love and hate are mixed up in the usual manner. The most in the filling scene is that in which a child is thrown into the den of lions, to be rescued by the hero. The lions are a magnificent pair, and did not appear in the very season and the standard manner of creating the tamer and the pair, and did not appear in the very season and the pair, and did not appear in the very season that the present system was constructed, and the present system was constructed.
